All Perfect as Astros Near Moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Tugged ahead ever-faster by the gentle pull of lunar gravity, Apollo 17's astronauts homed in with precision today on a bitter-sweet afternoon rendezvous with the moon.

Everything aboard their "perfect" spacecraft appeared in order for the critical rocket firing into lunar orbit at 2:47 p.m. EST and America's final Apollo moon landing Monday in a deep canyon believed carpeted with ash from an ancient volcano.

The last men of Apollo — Eugene A. Cernan, Ronald E. Evans and Jack Schmitt — slipped from the dominant influence of Earth gravity at 11:16 p.m. Saturday, a few minutes after they began their third full night in space.

They were 38,684 miles from the moon, rushing toward it at 2,282 miles per hour. By the time of their arrival, the pull of lunar gravity was to increase their speed by more than 500 m.p.h.

A little before bedtime the astronauts told Mission Control they thought they could see sunlight flashing off the tumbling, discarded Saturn rocket that started them on their voyage. "I think I've got it sighted behind us and above us," Schmitt said.

While the spacemen are swinging into their first orbit behind the moon, the rocket will crash into the moon's face with the force of 11 tons of TNT. Scientists expect artificial moonquakes triggered by the impact will provide new clues about the moon's interior.

The pilots also got the word their aim was so true they could skip a course correction scheduled for Saturday evening and might be able to forget about a final correction maneuver today.

"You've been looking real good. You're homing in on a 53½ nautical mile (61 statute mile) perilune," said capsule communicator Gordon Fullerton, indicating Apollo 17 would swing behind the moon at exactly the right altitude to brake itself into orbit.

The astronauts wrapped up their inspection of Challenger in about two hours and, back inside the command ship America, prepared for a study of cosmic ray flashes that past

Apollo crews have reported "seeing" inside their eyes.

Scientists believe the flashes are caused by cosmic rays either hitting an astronaut's optic nerve or passing through his brain. The astronauts take turns wearing a photographic film-lined helmet for an hour to help scientists verify this.

The astronauts produced some tense moments for ground controllers — and Cernan's wife Barbara — by failing to respond to repeated wakeup calls and sleeping an extra 70 minutes Saturday morning. They had bedded down 20 minutes late on their second night in space, and were allowed an extra 30 minutes of sleep before the first wakeup call was broadcast to them at 9:03 a.m. EST.

The call, the opening strains of the University of Kansas Jayhawks fight song, got no response from Evans, a 1956 university alumnus. Neither did voice calls or a wailing Klaxon-like warning horn. Finally, at 10:14 a.m., a repeat of the fight song, horn and voice calls got a reluctant response.

"We're asleep," Cernan groaned from space.

"That's the understatement of the year," said Fullerton. Rousing himself, Cernan quipped: "That was some party last night. It was a humdinger. Our biggest problem this morning is keeping Ron from going back to sleep."

Evans was supposed to have slept with his earphones on so he could hear the wakeup call. Mission Control said it appeared either Evans had turned the volume down or the earphone had slipped off.

Evans' wife, Jan, said her husband always has been difficult to awaken, even in 1966 when he was a fighter pilot on the carrier USS Ticonderoga and was chosen as an astronaut.

"On the ship," she told UPI, "they had to put a Baby Ben clock inside a metal dishpan to wake him. Once he wakes up, he's the nicest guy in the world."

Evans and Schmitt breakfasted on grits, which Evans recalled was added to the space menu by Apollo 16's Charles M. Duke, "the little South Carolina boy we had up here last time."

"They're really not too bad — a little butter on them, a little bit dry ... but they're not bad at all," Evans said. But Cernan, who passed up his grits, said that judgment "does not apply to the little old farm boy from Chicago."

Mission Control read the astronauts a summary of the day's news and Cernan, who comes from the Chicago suburb of Bellwood, asked for additional details on the United Air Line jet crash Friday near Midway Airport.

Schmitt and Cernan began their last inspection of Challenger, locked onto the nose of the command ship America, at 12:30 p.m., almost on schedule despite their late wakeup. They tested its instruments and radios, just as they did on Friday, and practiced donning their moonwalking suits inside its cramped cabin.

No Hint of Breakthrough In Search for Viet Peace

GIF SUR YVETTE, France (UPI) — Henry A. Kissinger and Hanoi negotiators completed a week of intensive secret negotiations Saturday but gave no hint of any breakthrough in their search for a Vietnam cease-fire accord. While they met the heaviest fighting in a month flared in South Vietnam.

Kissinger's deputy, Gen. Alexander Haig, left Paris for Washington at 10:30 p.m. Saturday to report to President Nixon on the result of last week's meetings.

The U.S. delegation said experts from the U.S. and North Vietnamese delegations will hold a technical session today.

The White House advisor and North Vietnam's two top negotiators returned to this quiet town 15 miles south of Paris and met for three hours and 40 minutes at a villa owned by the French Communist party.

Just before the meeting—the sixth this week — French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann said he thought the world press was being too pessimistic about prospects for an early peace in Vietnam. But Hanoi radio, broadcasting identical statements by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong, said U.S. air raids in Vietnam had "dimmed the prospects for peace."

In Moscow the Soviet Union announced it had signed a new aid agreement with North Vietnam under which Moscow will ship to Hanoi "large consignments of goods, equipment and other property of great significance for the development of the republic's national economy, as well as give necessary assistance in the strengthening of her defense potential."

Kissinger, with a weary wave of his hand, left the heavily guarded villa shortly before 7 p.m. (1 p.m. EST), and drove back to Paris to report to Washington on the result of his meeting with senior Hanoi diplomats Le Duc Tho and Xuan Thuy.

Neither side issued any comment indicating they have resolved the outstanding issues. The North Vietnamese smiled broadly as they left the white-walled meeting place.

In Paris earlier, Schumann told newsmen he remained optimistic about the prospects of an early peace.

Schumann said he stood by his recent statement that newspaper writers were too pessimistic about the outcome of the new Paris peace meetings.

Schumann also told newsmen France was prepared to play a larger role in the search for a Vietnamese peace if asked to do so. He said Paris already had pledged to take part in the planned international conference which will discuss guarantees for the peace agreement, and would become one of the guarantors of the pact.

Kissinger's talks with the North Vietnamese Saturday followed hours of negotiations the two sides have had since the 22nd round of conversations started Monday.

Late Friday, the Viet Cong Foreign Minister, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, said differences between the two sides remain because the United States is seeking renegotiation of basic points already agreed in the October draft accord.

She said these included the withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops, restoration of the de-militarized zone and the formula of the proposed three-segment national council of reconciliation.

Truman Rests Better, Speaks First Time

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Harry S. Truman, his aged and ailing heart gaining strength, spoke a few soft words to his wife, daughter and doctor Saturday. Although still critically ill, the 88-year-old former President rested better than at any time in the last few days.

"He spoke for the first time," said Truman's daughter, Margaret Daniel. "I would say he is better, but not out of the woods by any means."

Dr. Wallace Graham, Truman's personal physician, said Truman was "tolerating" the intravenous feedings and that he was resting better than "anytime in recent days."

"Dr. Graham asked him if he felt better and he said 'yes.' Literally said 'yes,'" Mrs. Daniel said.

Truman received flowers from President and Mrs. Nixon and a telegram from former President and Mrs. Johnson. Two Christmas bells tied with a red ribbon hung from the top of a big window in his sixth floor room at Research Hospital.

As the tough little man battled for the fifth day against age and infection, signs in nearby shop windows showed the same pep that Truman did when he led the nation.

"Give 'em hell, Harry. Let's get well," they said.

Truman tried to do just that. He was fed every four hours and gained needed strength.

"President Truman continues to tolerate his feedings well," said Dr. Graham in a medical statement. "We are trying to establish a better nutritional balance, stabilize and regulate his body chemistry and strengthen his heart and his functions."

Dr. Graham said Truman breathed easier and was more alert. He also said the fluid that was congesting his lungs was draining.

Truman was rushed to Research Hospital Tuesday afternoon with a congested lung that aggravated his aging heart. He slipped from serious to critical condition Wednesday night.

"He looks much better," said his daughter. He answered questions in a very simple way — but he answered. He is talking through masks and it is difficult to understand him. His answers consist mostly of 'yes' and 'no.'"

"I'm superstitious," she said, smiling. Let's keep our fingers crossed."

Graham, 62, a quiet, gray-haired physician who has attended to Truman since the man from Missouri was president in 1946, said the former chief executive responded to questions during the day and seemed more alert.

Truman's pulse continued strong at a rate of 110. His temperature was 99.6 and his blood pressure was 110 over 70 at mid-afternoon.

Mrs. Daniel took her mother, 87-year-old Bess Truman, home for the day during the afternoon.

"Mother's cook is off for the weekend, so guess who's cooking?" Mrs. Daniel said. "Dad is asleep. I'm taking Mother home for a rest."

Truman's pulse rate had jumped to 124 Friday night and had been reported at 120 when he came out of an "ultra-critical" period Wednesday, the day after he was hospitalized with a lung infection.

"He is improved today but remains critical," Graham said in a medical report read by hospital spokesman John Dreves. "His temperature is 100 degrees. Kidney function is adequate. He continues to tolerate his tube feeding well."

Graham said Truman showed response to nasal feeding of the wheat-based liquid.

"The tube feeding provides a different type of nourishment than can be received intravenously. The tube feeding provides protein and that kind of thing can't be provided intravenously," he said.

Neither Mrs. Daniel nor her mother, Bess, 87, were at the hospital for Saturday's first

Strauss Picked by Dems, Jean Wins, Then Resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Texas lawyer Robert Strauss, promising to restore peace and unity to his party, was elected Democratic national chairman Saturday after Jean Westwood beat back an ouster move and then resigned.

The 54-year-old Dallas resident — former party treasurer and the candidate of old line party regulars — defeated two other contenders on the first ballot less than an hour after Mrs. Westwood gave up the job with a plea to the party to hold fast to the reforms that shook it to its foundations during the last year.

The vote represented a comeback for Strauss who appeared to be in trouble after an effort, mainly spearheaded by his supporters, to oust Mrs. Westwood failed on a 105 to 100 vote. But after a recess Mrs. Westwood reappeared before the committee and announced she was stepping down with no conditions attached to her resignation.

She had earlier pledged to quit if Strauss would also drop out and the committee could agree on a chairman aligned neither with the McGovern faction that backed her or the old regulars behind Strauss.

It was reported that she was persuaded to drop her demand for Strauss to quit the race as a condition of her resignation by committee members who had opposed the ouster but favored an opened race for the chairmanship.

Throughout his month-long campaign for the office, Strauss had insisted that he was as committed to the controversial party reforms that gave a larger voice to women, blacks and youths as any other candidate, but his opponents said Strauss' support was founded on anti-reform sentiment.

The other announced contenders were California State chairman Charles D. Manatt, Maine national committeeman

George Mitchell, and New York State chairman Joseph Crangle. Although not an open candidate, former party chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien also was in the running.

Police Seek Three After Paltz Robbery

By MATT SPIRENG

NEW PALTZ Area police are conducting a search for three young men who allegedly robbed a student at gunpoint Saturday in his dormitory room on the campus of the State University College at New Paltz.

New Paltz Village Police, who are investigating, said three men in their early 20's entered room B16 in College Hall and robbed the occupant of between $220 and $236 at the point of a pump shotgun or rifle shortly before noon Saturday.

The occupant of the room, who was alone at the time and whose name was not released, refused to turn over the money to the armed thieves, authorities said. The robbers, however, apparently knew where the money was hidden, police said, and "helped themselves to it." The money was kept in a knapsack in a corner of the room, it was noted.

The occupant was told to lie on the floor as the robbers left, police said, but he pursued them on foot, although he was unable to catch up with them. The youth then contacted campus Security personnel who notified Village Police approximately two hours after the robbery occurred, Village Police said. A spokesman for the college said, however, that he was told by Security personnel that the police were notified immediately.

The robbers, one of whom was said to be black and the other two white, were not seen to enter any other building, police said. They were also not seen entering any cars, it was noted.

According to police, the youth who was robbed had been displaying his money the night before while drinking. He told police, however, that he had not seen the robbers before, authorities said.

During Gen. Flanagan's tenure, Fort Riley became a Modern Volunteer Army post, and the Division strength has been maintained even with the end of the draft calls. The success of the Division in filling its ranks with volunteers can be attributed to Gen. Flanagan's persistent interest in improving the life-style of the soldier.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant of Field Artillery in the Regular Army, and after completion of the Artillery basic officers course at Fort Sill, Okla., he was assigned to the 674th Glider Field Artillery Battalion at Camp Mackall, N.C. in May 1943. On February 4, 1945, he jumped with his battalion on Tagaytay Ridge, Luzon, as a part of the 11th Airborne attack toward Manila from the south.

Between global conflicts, he served in miscellaneous state-side assignments, then in June 1953 he returned to the 674th Airborne Field Artillery Battalion, 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team as its commander in Korea.

He continued to command the 674th until November 1954 when he attended the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va. He next became assistant secretary to the general staff, Office of the Chief of Staff, U.S. Army.

Gen. Flanagan next served in Germany where he served in turn as executive officer and Division Artillery commander with the 3rd Armored Division assigned to Headquarters, U.S. Army Element, Central Army Group (NATO), Heidelberg, Germany, where he served as G-2 (Intelligence) officer. In the following May he became secretary of the general staff to the commander in chief, U.S. Army, Europe. He was promoted to brigadier general in September 1966, and in January 1967 became assistant division commander of the 25th Infantry Division in the Republic of Vietnam.

He was presented the Pontifical Decoration initiated by Pope Gregory XVI (1863) for exceptional military or civic service. This award was made to Gen. Flanagan just last week.

Gen. Flanagan is succeeded by Major General Gordon J. Duquemin, who is currently special assistant to the chief of staff, Headquarters, U.S. Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va. He will arrive at Fort Riley during the first week of January.

Wawarsing Mulls Snowmobile Roads

ELLENVILLE support of the town highway department and the Ecological Task Force.

Town Board members Thursday night announced that they are considering releasing about two to five roads in the town for snowmobiling this winter.

Supervisor Frank Harkin said that the highway department will investigate and make recommendations.

Among roads suggested for snowmobiling are Rock Haven, Lundy, Upper and Lower Fordmore and Fort Ben Roads.

The board agreed to table action on a resolution submitted to it by the State Association of Towns which is seeking to retain the present system of Justice Courts. Harkin said that members expressed the desire to study the proposal further before considering any support of either the old system or the new one of which they presently have no knowledge.

At the suggestion of the town's Environmental Commission, the town board indicated it will support WECUD (Wawarsing Ecological Cleanup Day) to be held sometime in April. The program also has the

County Naturalization Ceremonies

Anniversary of Pearl...33 New U.S. Citizens

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON — Thirty-three men, women and children became citizens of the United States in ceremonies in Kingston Thursday, the 31st anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

Presiding Justice Louis G. Bruhn mentioned the attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941 and spoke of America's involvement and heavy losses in both World War I and II, telling the new citizens to "mark well, that in neither of those wars did we seek nor did we gain any territorial or material advantages."

In both of these wars, he explained, "our entry was motivated by a strong desire to overthrow tyranny and preserve liberty for ourselves and all liberty-loving people everywhere in the world."

Justice Bruhn said that the same noble motivation saw our nation become involved in the Korean and Vietnam conflicts.

"A nation," he said, "that is motivated by such lofty purposes and noble designs surely deserves your undying and unswerving loyalty so that, in common with your fellow Americans, you will recognize that it is your solemn duty to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States from its enemies within as well as from its enemies abroad.

Bear in mind also, Justice Bruhn continued, "that there are forces in our land constantly seeking to stir up dissension among all of us. These same people will attempt to appeal to your prejudice and to your ancient loyalties in the hope of unfairly influencing, especially, your political action. Reject them because the great majority of our members are honestly, sincerely and conscientiously striving to eliminate all prejudice and hatreds that impair our national unity."

Yielding for Emergency Vehicles

The Right-of-Way...Majority Are Okay

By MATT SPIPENG

KINGSTON — Siren blaring, red lights glowing, an emergency vehicle proceeds along one of Ulster County's roadways. It could be a fire truck, an ambulance or a police car, but whichever it is, the vehicle's visible and audible signals are turned on for a reason — to warn other motorists of its approach.

What does the motorist do? Does he stop dead in his tracks?

Does he keep going, expecting the emergency vehicle to pass him? Does he try to outrun the vehicle?

According to law, the motorist should pull to the right, parallel to the edge of the roadway, and stop until the emergency vehicle has passed.

But does the motorist do this? Many Ulster County authorities say he does — most of the time.

According to Ulster County Fire Coordinator Raymond J.

Morris Jr., the biggest problem occurs in populated areas where motorists sometimes take an "I don't care" or "Where am I gonna go" attitude.

"The majority of people are good about it," said Gilbert E. Gray, president of Doctor's Ambulance Service. "It's only about 10 per cent that cause the problems."

Gray told The Freeman recently that he has seen people turn around in the driver's seat and look at the emergency vehicle approaching from the rear while continuing to move along the roadway.

Getting the motorist to yield the right-of-way is "always a problem," said Wilbur A. Matthews, owner of Fatum's Ambulance Service, "but it's a problem we've learned to live with."

Kingston Police Chief Julius Glassman pointed out that problems occur particularly at intersections. Emergency vehicles, by law, are allowed to proceed through red lights "with caution." Glassman noted and getting through the light can sometimes be difficult.

"Sometimes people will panic," said Acting Kingston Fire Chief Robert Maines. "They get all confused and don't know what to do."

Lieutenant E. J. Minahan of the Hurley State Police suggested that one reason people might not pull over for an emergency vehicle is that their minds are preoccupied, particularly during the hours when they are returning from work, or when they are looking forward to getting some place.

"It could be a seasonal problem," Minahan told The Freeman. He pointed out that during the winter months motorists drive with their windows up, often with their radios playing, and they just don't hear the siren.

Other authorities agreed that this might be the single largest reason for motorists not yielding for right-of-way to emergency vehicles.

Cars are also more soundproof now than they were in the past, also adding to the difficulty, Maines pointed out.

According to law, vehicles going in both directions should pull over, but sometimes this is impractical, Minahan told The Freeman. "On four-lane roads like 9W, the approaching motorist should technically pull over, but realistically he shouldn't," he said.

"Emergency vehicle drivers have to use discretion and extreme caution, also," Minahan said. "I don't think anybody would intend to impede an emergency vehicle. Once they see the vehicle, they tend to pull off to the side."

It was noted by several of the authorities that emergency vehicles themselves must yield the right-of-way to stopped school buses, picking up or discharging passengers. "At any time a child could come darting out," Minahan said.

SS Changes

KINGSTON

Application for disability benefits may be filed after a worker's death under the new provisions of the Social Security Law becoming effective in January, according to George J. Habernig, social security district manager in Kingston.

"This change won't affect many people, but it can be important to some families," Habernig said.

The provision will only apply in cases of deaths occurring after Dec. 31, 1969, he said.

"But there is a deadline for filing such applications," he said.

In the future, survivors will have 3 months after a disabled worker's death to file an application for his retroactive disability insurance benefits, he explained.

"But an application must be filed before Feb. 1, 1973, if the worker died in October 1972 or earlier."

Previously, applications for disability benefits had to be filed while the disabled worker was still alive.

The change in the law will provide benefits to the survivors of workers who were severely disabled for 6 months before their death but for some reason didn't apply for benefits.

If it's found that the worker is eligible for disability payments, his survivors will be able to get retroactive disability payments as well as any survivors benefits that may be payable now or in the future," Habernig said.

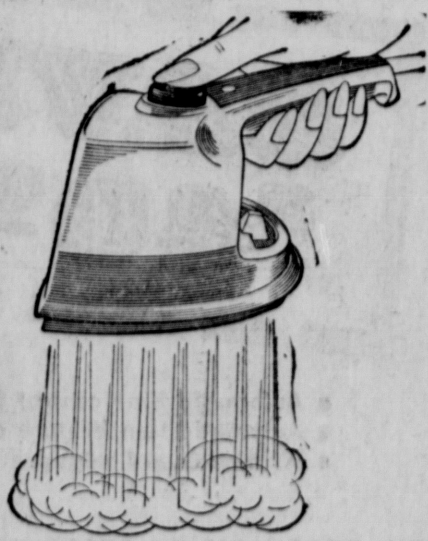

To get more information about payments for a period of disability before the disabled worker died, or to apply for benefits, call, write, or visit the social security office at 57 Albany Ave., Kingston. The phone number is 338-7307.

Council...Not a Striking Performance

COUNCIL CAPERS—Tuesday night's meeting of the Common Council reminds us of the story about a bowler on a bad night.

"I only made one mistake," the guy says after shooting a hot 350. "I showed up."

The aldermen, unfortunately, don't have that excuse. They have to show up. The rules require them to be physically present the first Tuesday of the month at 7:30.

We should have known it was going to be one of those nights when Alderman-at-Large Bob Gallo showed up in his mourning clothes, fresh from a wake. Gallo, a florist by trade, does a lot of business with area undertakers. Sometimes he "helps out" and as such has to dress the part. He was well-dressed for Tuesday night's meeting.

Usually, when there's a dearth of legislation, one can count on some ad libs from the players. Such was not the case Tuesday, although the boys did manage to rig a tie vote on one of the trip requests, thus forcing Gallo to cast the deciding vote. That was good for a few chuckles.

Eddie Roux, usually good for a few laughs, tried Tuesday night, but his complaint about someone putting up an unmarked stop sign in his ward didn't quite make it.

BRIAN SMITH did manage to get a rise out of Junie Primo by asking for a report on city hall expenditures. Smith, the minority leader, has been threatening to ask Primo, the Building and Supplies chairman, for that report for the past three months. Smith, instead, asked the city treasurer, two weeks ago. Failing to get an answer, he asked Primo on Tuesday. Primo, piqued, said Smith should have asked him first. Smith still doesn't have a report.

Speaking of Smith, some of the boys have taken to calling him "Mrs. Sims," all in fun, of course.

The story is this: Three weeks ago, Bernie Sims, the 13th Ward Republican, ordered a pair of tickets to the Walt Clark Testimonial (Dec. 1) for himself and his wife, Mary. A few days before the dinner for the retired Freeman police reporter, Mrs. Sims called to Texas; daughter Ginny had given birth to the couple's sixth grandchild. Bernie, to be known as "the Hogan Affair." Followers of the city politics might recall that Jack Hogan was passed over by Koenig for reappointment to the Civil Service Commission this past June. Koenig appointed Leon Miller, an insurance man, after some 56 days of deliberation. The Hogans, to be sure, took it very hard. Two weeks ago, Koenig announced that Miller had resigned. His replacement? . . . Jack Hogan.

THERE ARE a number of theories on what happened. There is the "downtown dynasty theory" which says that Koenig, fearing retaliation from the Hogan's next year, decided to make peace. The Hogans, according to Hogan supporters, control the 11th ward and adjoining areas and without that support the mayor could be in trouble.

The Koenig camp (not the mayor; he doesn't discuss politics) snorts at that with the rather logical statement, "with 4,500 votes under his belt, Frank doesn't have to worry about anything."

It's just possible that Koenig made a boo-boo in naming Hogan, who, and nobody disputes it, knows all the ins and outs of the Civil Service Commission after six years on it. Hogan may have been that rarest of individuals: the indispensable man.

Speaking of Alex Nirenburg (who was speaking of Alex Nirenburg?) we read where the current county legislator from Ellenville and the former candidate for district attorney, has opened a law office in Kingston. Might Alex be looking for another county run for office? Might Alex be looking for another run for DA? A Kingston office might be a nice base of operations.

The key, however, will be whether the very popular DA Frank Vogt decides to go again next year.

THE PARKING GARAGE—The mayor has allowed free parking at city meters and in city parking lots for the holiday but curiously did not extend his largess to the Uptown Parking Garage.

Perhaps it isn't so curious when one considers that next year is an election year and that the garage is sure to be an issue . . . especially if the garage turns out to be a financial white elephant. The goal is to break even which would be impossible, if it isn't already, without those December receipts. Ergo, no free parking at the Uptown Parking Garage.

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE—Dave Lenefsky, former candidate for State Senate in Ulster-Dutchess (against Jay Rolison in 1970) participated in a panel discussion televised locally Wednesday night.

The topic was the environment, specifically, the United Nations meeting on international environmental problems held in Stockholm this past summer.

Lenefsky, as a member of the United Nations Association, had been in Stockholm and from what we saw Wednesday night seemed to know what he was talking about. Unfortunately Lenefsky fell victim to the "superstar syndrome" all too common in TV. The other two panelists were Margaret Mead, famous anthropologist and self-appointed spokesman for the young and Henry Diamond, commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation, still riding the crest of the successful environmental bond issue last month.

It got so bad for Lenefsky that at one point the director was running a split screen shot of Mead looking at Diamond while Lenefsky was talking. Lenefsky shouldn't be too upset. After all . . . that's show biz.

seeking company for the Clark dinner invited Smith to go along. Thus, "Mrs. Sims."

Speaking of Walt Clark, Sims announced just prior to the dinner that "Clarkie" had been appointed a Republican committeeman in the 13th Ward. "Clarkie," always a diligent worker at The Freeman, could have a profound affect on next year's mayoral elections. Frank Koenig may win by only 4,000 votes.

There was some talk, Tuesday night, of what has come

IMPROVISATIONS

In last week's column I made a note of having missed the special showing of the original movie, Showboat, in which Paul Robeson did such a magnificent solo, "Old Man River." Somehow it got lost in the shuffle, but I will repeat, no one has ever been able to surpass Paul's version of that old standard . . . Mrs. Margaret Simmons goes as a representative of the V.F.W. Ladies Auxiliary (Post 1386) when they make the annual visit to the Immigration Court for naturalization ceremonies. I've often thought about the special day an alien becomes a citizen, how they have studied and worked so hard to achieve something far too many of us take for granted. With all of the many, and varied problems we may encounter here, it is still by far the best place in the world to be living . . . Next year I would like to see more of my young brothers and sisters get involved in things like the Student Government programs — school, city, county, state and national. It wouldn't hurt and it might help them to gain an insight into the workings of governmental processes. Belated congratulations to Miss Debbie Knox on her recent election as treasurer of the County Youth in Government program . . . There are so many things we all must do for the Christmas season, but let us not forget those who are less fortunate than ourselves — especially children. Christmas is for children, and they have no race, creed or color. PLEASE support WKNY's "Toys for Tots." Even though the main drive will be over at this reading, your contribution of a new toy or cash will be gladly accepted.

WGHO's "Happy Christmas Fund" is a good way to help spread cheer to those who would otherwise be cheerless. Thanks . . . In the past week I found out that the old song "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out" can be startlingly true. I am grateful to two who remembered the downs in their lives, and held out a helping hand. May God continue to Bless . . . The Ulster County Association for Retarded Children is having their dinner-dance tonight in Rosendale to raise funds for toys for these special children . . . Speaking of children and Christmas, why don't you call an Agency and see about having a child come and spend the holiday with you and your family? I'm sure an extra plate or toy won't cost too much, and the child will be wealthy in home surroundings, warmth and love, and most important the knowledge that someone cared . . . The Black Assembly holds a regional meeting today in Poughkeepsie, and election of officers is slated . . . We have learned that S.C.O.R.E. members are intent on the idea of bringing new cultural and educational benefits into the Kingston and Mid-Hudson Valley area, as their plans materialize we will pass them on . . . Next Spring is the proposed time for the Black Assembly's planned Black Expo. This project will take a lot of work and we hope that the entire Community will band together to make it work well . . . A Pan-African Reception was held Dec. 8, in the Biltmore Hotel's Grand Ballroom. It marked the third annual reception for Pan-African Delegates, and it also served to celebrate the 27th Session of the United Nations General Assembly. Ossie Davis, actor, was master of ceremonies — Gary Bartz and the Ntu Troop provided the "sounds" and speakers Imamu Amiri Baraka, Gil Fernandes and Ambassador Salim A. Salim were presented. The Congress of African People sponsored this event, and this year's proceeds will go to the African Party for Independence of Guinea-Bissau and The Cape Verde Islands . . . Any organization wishing to have a catalog of 11 Black films available, books, records for children, pre-teens and teens; film-strips, slides, posters may write to: Afro-American Heritage House, Inc., 24 Whittier Drive, Englishtown, N.J. 07726. This organization has everything you need to work with as far as tools for teaching, and/or learning the highlights of the Black Experience in Africa, America and the world-at-large. Their Afro-American Fact Pack is a dramatic and entertaining way to introduce Black History and instill a positive image of Black culture.

There is so much talk about education . . . the need for it, the "new" education, busing, integration of schools, problems, problems . . . well, let us stop wasting time fighting over whose fault it is that our children can't read, let's get on with the business of teaching them, parents and teachers jointly. I could cheerfully strangle the parties who are responsible for the idiotic theory that school should be "fun" . . . school is for learning. It is there to provide children with a training ground for the business of living and earning a living. Teachers do not go through the agonies of preparation for their careers just to wind up as glorified babysitters paid to amuse their charges. School is not an entertainment center. It is high time we all realized that if children come out of school uneducated, we have an entire generation of unemployables. A sharp line must be drawn between the duties of a teacher and the duty of parents. To my young brothers and sisters I would say, strongly, there is no where you can go, and nothing you can do without an education. You must prepare yourselves, the world outside your homes, and school is a rough, tough merry-go-round, and if you don't know what you are doing (and know how to do it a little better than anyone else) you'll find yourself on a creek without a boat or paddle. If you are told you cannot handle any certain subjects, and you think you can . . . don't quit, or sit back and just slide by . . . TRY . . . Enlist the help of your parents in securing your right to try, then dig in, hang on and do the very best you can. Don't give in to fear of failure . . . TRY . . . don't be discouraged if you do fail, we all do at sometime or other, start all over again and TRY . . . Stop looking for others to pave the way for you, don't look for an easy way. MAKE A WAY . . . DEPEND ON YOURSELF, and above all else, BELIEVE IN YOURSELF. SOME INFORMATION: E.O.G. (Educational Opportunity Grant), N.D.S.L. (National Defense Student Loan) and any bank can give you forms to fill out for the many Higher Education Grants available through the State and Federal Governments. MINISKIRTED SOLDIERETTES

(UPI Telephoto)

Israel's Army Ranks as One of Prettiest

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Pound for pound, Israel's army has got to be one of the prettiest in the world, not to mention one of the toughest.

The reason: thousands of miniskirted soldierettes in the ranks.

At 18, Israeli girls are drafted into the armed forces along with the boys. They serve 20 months active duty, at base pay of 33 pounds ($8) a month, then are committed to the reserves until they marry and pass the fourth month of pregnancy.

"It's sort of like a club," a corporal named Ruthie explained. "If you haven't belonged, you're out of it."

Exemptions to service are granted to girls who are already married, physically unfit or who can prove that they adhere to ultraorthodox religious beliefs that prohibit military duty.

The Supreme Court recently upheld the induction of a rabbi's daughter who appeared at her deferment hearing in a miniskirt and was unable to answer basic questions about Judaism.

Basic training includes rifle range instruction and cross-country marches. Some of the trainees win their paratroop wings at jumping out of an airplane five times.

Few will ever carry a gun except perhaps in a ceremonial parade or on guard duty in front of the defense ministry headquarters.

Their function is not that of a combat soldier. Instead, the girls man the rear echelon as secretaries, radio operators and drivers to free the men for front-line duty.

Many become officers—the commander of the Women's Army Corps is a full colonel—and wield a polite but respected authority over their male counterparts of lower rank.

That doesn't mean that a boy private won't elbow aside a girl lieutenant if they're both competing as hitchhikers for a seat in the car of a good samaritan motorist.

The extensive mix of sexes makes for social problems. Birth control pills are available to the soldierettes on request.

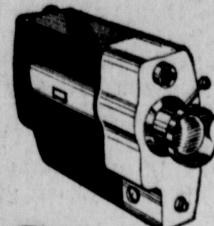

An unmarried girl who becomes pregnant is discharged honorably and recently bemoaned the fact that the rate of venereal disease among the troops was increasing at an alarming rate.

Dislocation Aid... Sometimes You're Better Off

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Don't panic if you suddenly discover your home is in the path of a proposed new state highway. you could wind up better off than you are now.

During the past decade, the methods of acquiring property for highway construction have undergone some surprising changes aimed at easing the trauma involved in dislocating a family.

The changes have been in two areas, one financial and the other psychological.

Ten years ago, the state paid you for your house at fair market value, nailed a condemnation order to your front door and set a date by which you had to vacate the premises.

Today, although the state still is unable to reimburse you for the sentimental attachment to your home, a wide-ranging program of financial and personal assistance has been established under which the state buys your old house, also helps you find another one and pays virtually all of the relocation expenses involved up to a maximum of $15,000.

James E. Collison, chief of the New York Department of Transportation's Real Property Division, is the man in charge of acquiring property when the location of a new road finally is determined.

"We've been paying moving expenses and pro-rating taxes on property we have acquired since 1963," Collison said in a recent interview. "Prior to that time, the state made a lump sum payment for the land and the homeowner was left to his own devices to relocate."

Collison contends that over the past decade, the procedure for handling dislocations has been humanized.

For example, the state tries to advise and counsel displaced homeowners with its program of relocation advisory assistance. This consists of many of the same services provided by a real estate agent to someone buying a house, but costs the buyer nothing.

Once the bounds of a highway project are determined, Collison's staff of field agents survey the available housing in the immediate area.

"We determine that available housing conforms to existing codes and that it meets strict specifications for decent, safe and sanitary housing," Collison said.

"At the same time, we are seeking housing that is compatible to those we plan to demolish so that we can offer the homeowner something equal or better than what he now has," he added.

Collison's staff established a field office when there are a large number of families to be dislocated so that people can more conveniently take advantage of the consultation services.

When the time comes to acquire the property for the highway, the state makes the owner an offer based on a fair market evaluation of the property's worth. The offering price becomes a guarantee of what the state will pay, but the property owner may negotiate for a higher price or go to court to insist on a higher price.

Assuming that the state and the property owner agree on the selling price, the state then begins to add on the benefits available under the so-called supplemental housing package.

Here's the way it works: The property owner is shown the homes in the area considered by the state to be comparable replacement housing for the particular homeowner's circumstances. If the replacement home costs more than the state had paid for the family's former residence, the state will pay up to $5,000 to help make up the difference.

Next the state reimburses the dislocated family for all of the closing costs involved in purchasing a new home, including legal fees, title searches, appraisals and other expenses involved in obtaining a mortgage. If there was a pre-payment penalty when the old home was sold to the state, the state pays that too, in addition to reimbursing the owner for taxes paid on the old home in advance.

In the event there is a delay between the time the property is condemned and the time the family actually moves into a new home, the state pays 6 per cent interest on the price if offered for the property plus interest on any amount added to the selling price through negotiation or court litigation.

Now comes the actual move. The state will cover the costs in one of two ways at the family's option. It can choose to be reimbursed with a flat rate payment based on mileage up to 50 miles and the amount of goods to be moved or it can have the move handled by a moving company and the bill sent to the state.

In either case, the state adds on a $200 dislocation allowance to cover the cost of such items as new curtains, utility deposits and other so-called "hidden" moving expenses.

The total of all these "supplemental payments" cannot exceed $15,000 in each instance and seldom do, Collison said. But it is conceivable that a family whose $15,000 home was taken by the state for a road project could wind up with double that amount by the time it is relocated.

Nothing in the program precludes a family from finding its own replacement housing, provided that the property chosen meets the state and federal criteria for decent, safe and sanitary housing," Collison said.

Tenants dislocated from rental property are handled differently, but generally benefit from the same services. If the comparable housing offered by the state or found by the renter costs more than the old rental, the state will make up the difference up to $1,000 a year over a four-year period.

The payments are made on a yearly basis, Collison said, and only after an inspection determines that the new rental continues to meet state standards.

Should the renter decide to buy rather than seeking another rental property, he can receive a lump sum payment of up to $4,000 to help finance the purchase. Again, in either case, the state foots the moving bills.

When commercial or farm property is involved in a relocation effort, Collison said the merchant or farmer may decide to discontinue his business rather than relocate. In this case, he can accept an "in lieu" payment of up to $10,000 based on his net income for the previous two years to compensate him for going out of business.

Should the merchant or farmer choose to move, he is entitled to the same benefits as a homeowner and the state pays the moving costs.

During 1971, Collison's agency negotiated the purchase of property worth $22 million, including 1,387 housing units, 270 businesses and 18 farms. The state paid nearly $1.3 million in moving expenses, $628,800 in supplemental benefits, $129,450 for pro-rating taxes and $204,000 for mortgage financing assistance.

"The system has worked well with the brief experience we've had with it and the people that we have relocated generally have indicated they were satisfied," Collison said.

The few complaints that have surfaced center on the delays in processing the financial reimbursements and cases in which some persons feel they were asked to move too soon before the state actually needed their property.

Collison said a survey was being conducted among dislocated families in Canajoharie and Little Falls to determine ways of improving the assistance program. The results are expected to be released in a few weeks.

The first rule of advertising is to get their attention. The second rule is sustained, repeated advertising. Good advertising doesn't cost... it pays!

Ambitious Goal

Just when it appeared that President Nixon's new Cabinet was to have a predominantly Harvard tinge, the chief executive surprised a lot of people by naming an active union official, who never got beyond high school, to be his Secretary of Labor.

But it doesn't really matter where the President's new official family comes from. It's where it is going. Mr. Nixon is heading his aides in the right direction but there's many a terrific hurdle to surmount if they are to reach their destination.

The first three nominees all have Harvard backgrounds. The fourth comes from the sidewalks of New York.

It is quite apparent that the President in making wholesale changes among his top aides has several goals in mind. He wants a Cabinet more in tune with his own thinking and without question he would like to reduce government spending as well as lop thousands off the payrolls.

These are noble objectives.

Whether they can be translated into reality is something else again because the pressures from both his own party and from the opposition are bound to be heavy and unrelenting.

In nominating Elliot L. Richardson to be Secretary of Defense, said by some to be the toughest job in Washington, next to that of the man in the White House, the President chose a young capable executive accustomed to the vagaries, tumult and insoluble problems of huge bureaucracy. Leaving the post of chief of Health, Education and Welfare, Mr. Richardson merely steps from a very hot frying pan into the fire. HEW was aptly described as the department of dirty air, dirty water and dirty looks.

A tough-minded Caspar Weinberger is the apparent heir to the post Mr. Richardson leaves behind. If you feel

INDIAN CHAMPION—Senator-elect James Abourezk, South Dakota Democrat, wants an Indian in charge of Indian affairs because, he says, the Indian Bureau is "trying to pull them away from their culture." The freshman senator knows what he is talking about. He was born and reared on the Sioux Rosebud Indian reservation.

CHRISTMAS MAIL DEADLINES

Better go to your post office and examine the Christmas mail deadline schedules so carefully prepared, to make sure your gifts and greetings will reach their destinations abroad, especially for the armed forces everywhere. These deadlines began Nov. 7 and run to Dec. 21.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I hope you're not thinking of being too frivolous on the the moon. That kinda stuff turned some people off last time!"

WASHINGTON — The armed forces have become top-heavy with brass. More and more officers are supervising fewer and fewer enlisted men. There are as many field grade officers today as in World War 2, although they have only one-fifth of the men to command. Swivel-chair generals multiply in the Pentagon like rabbits.

It was perhaps inevitable, therefore, that the brass would spill over into the civilian branches of government. Tens of thousands of retired officers have taken civilian jobs in the federal bureaucracy.

We made a spot check on a typical general who has command for a civilian desk. He is Lt. Gen. Herman Nickerson, who was passed over for Marine Corps commandant. As a consolation prize, he wangled a soft job as administrator of the prestigious National Credit Union Administration. This is the government agency that charters and oversees more than 11,000 credit unions from coast to coast.

General Nickerson, though less resplendent in mufti than military braid, behaves as if he had been appointed commandant. He is surrounded by a military retinue that he brought into the civilian agency with him — three colonels, his former aide de camp and a sergeant. Commandantlike, the general barks orders and expects instant obedience.

Although the NCUA is organized to "promote thrift" among credit unions, the general has surrounded himself with the lavish appurtenances of rank: a wide-screen television set for himself and his deputy administrator; a Mercury "Marquis" limousine with a telephone and a chauffeur; a Hi Fidelity stereo system which is also piped into his aide's office; deep pile rugs and overstuffed chairs; and an expensive, custom-made, hardwood stand-up signing desk.

When we dropped by the general's office, his top personnel officer called over the intercom and asked anxiously: "Is the old man in a bad mood?" He was told the boss was busy.

For several days now, General Nickerson has been too busy to talk to us. But a spokesman told us in his behalf that all the furnishings were authorized by the General Services Administration. A GSA spokesman, however, said that the furnishings were selected from "an authorized list" but that "no specific authorization" was given to assemble so many fancy items in one office.

More Junkies

Those determined travelers, the congressional junketeers, are off again inspecting America's worldwide interests. As usual, they are contriving to arrange their overseas business at the world's pleasure spots.

We have already published several junketing accounts since Congress went out of session and freed its members to wander around the world. Here is another in the series:

Representative Richard Hanna, D-Calif., a seven league-foot globetrotter, is rushing through 12 countries in 26 days. He plans stopovers in such tourist capitals as Athens, Cairo, Madrid and Tokyo. It will be his first visit to these cities since August when he made a similar tour. State Department cables reveal that Hanna may also travel to Jordan, Yemen and Saudi Arabia with friends he expects to meet in Beirut. The cables add that the congressman is authorized to draw the equivalent of $50 a day in local currencies to take care of his out-of-pocket expenses.

During the August junket, according to the cables, Hanna demanded the full red-carpet treatment, including a request for a military helicopter to lift him over the traffic jam that lesser tourists must cope with in Tokyo.

The congressman was traveling too fast to be reached, but aide Tom Lankard explained that his boss is touring the same area to complete research on housing and to talk trade with the oil-rich nations of the Mideast. Hanna is "very concerned about the energy crisis," added Lankard.

Footnote: Representative Dante Fascell, D-Fla., has just concluded a quick "study mission" to Guatemala where his brother happens to work for AID. The congressman was accompanied by his wife but paid her expenses out of his own pocket. They stayed with his brother. During the visit, Fascell also attended the Inter-American Congress.

A Natural Complaint

WASHINGTON — It is most natural to find Republican governors complaining that they didn't get help from the administration in Washington during the recent campaign and that they were to an extent ignored in party affairs. They are urging that there now be a closer relationship with them politically not only to strengthen the Republican party but to give them a greater voice in selecting the party's national chairman, in choosing Senate candidates and the dispensing of local patronage.

Revenue-sharing is, of course, introducing a new factor into the life of the states and cities. Huge sums of money will be provided by the federal government. This presumably will help the cities and other local units of government to reduce property taxes or at least avoid imposing higher levies.

In view of this interrelationship, it is not strange that the governors feel they should be more political cooperation between party officials at the national and state levels. The theory is that if the administration is able to make a success during the next four years in handling the revenue-sharing program, the Republican governor and Republican members of Congress will be able to benefit from this at the polls due to the increased popularity the party presumably would be getting.

Never before have the states and the federal government worked as closely as they will be doing now. Many departments will be concerned with the distribution of the new federal money and will be checking to see whether it is achieving the purposes intended. It is inevitable that some cities will be demanding more help from year to year. Certain states will feel that others are getting a bigger share. Federal officials, of course, have not put any strings on the funds and have not tried to stipulate how the money shall be spent, except, of course, to indicate that it is to be used for specific types of projects.

It is presumed, however, that once the program has been put into effect for a while and the cities and states find it helpful, the federal government will undertake a study of the financial side to learn whether the amounts being granted should be increased or whether the states and cities have the resources to permit the reduction of some of the funds distributed to them by the federal government.

But the probability is that the basic set-up will be tried for at least four or five years before there are any major changes. Meanwhile, the officials of city, county and state governments will be asked to give comprehensive reports of how they have spent the money furnished them through revenue sharing.

The experiment is a new one in American history. Although over the years federal funds have been allocated for various programs throughout the country, there has never been any such distribution of money from Washington which could substantially reduce the financial burden of governments at local levels.

In those areas where population has been decreasing and tax revenues have been lessened, revenue sharing will be of great assistance. But in the wealthier states there undoubtedly will be surveys made as to whether residents are being taxed to the extent they should be.

Much of the money being returned to a state is supplied by its own inhabitants through income taxes paid to the federal government. There are lots of states, however, which do not have sufficient industries or individuals to produce large sums in taxes. The revenue-sharing plan does permit an equalization in the sense that the federal government will be able to aid with greater contributions many a state, county and city which can't raise enough money to pay essential expenses. It will take several years to make a conclusive judgment on how effective the plan itself is proving to be. But it surely will be of great help to the governmental units at lower levels which at present are faced with the problem of getting money to meet rising costs.

President Nixon intends to have one of the departments involved concentrate on a constant study of revenue sharing to determine exactly how efficiently it is operating so that the federal government may know whether the system is fulfilling its intended purpose or whether it needs to be modified. This is one of the most important projects to be undertaken by the administration, and the expectation is that revenue sharing will turn out to be a constructive achievement.

'Bacchanalian, a Backward Step

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, grimly determined to usher in a brighter era of public morality, has commenced its clean-up efforts by marching backwards 50 years into the Prohibition era.

In an opinion written by Justice William Rehnquist, the Court ruled in a 6-3 vote that "the sale of liquor by the drink and lewd or naked dancing and entertainment should not take place simultaneously in bars and cocktail lounges."

The Rehnquist effort is both naive and a half-century tardy. At the moment the newest Justice was summoning his best prose to denounce "Bacchanalian revelries" in California saloons, New York Magazine was publishing a far more impressive document about "the new drug clubs" in Manhattan.

"Instead of all that bother with the State Liquor Authority," writes Julie Baumgold, "the juice bars began opening . . . obviously alcohol was unnecessary."

But alcohol is necessary to Justice Rehnquist's complaint. His argument rests on the quaintest amendment to the Constitution, the 21st, which officially repealed the attempt to ban booze.

The amendment is one of the dearest of dead letters in the law, but provided one of the liveliest Court decisions ever promulgated. Rehnquist, in fact, became so clinically explicit that much of the language in California vs. LaRue is beyond the self-imposed limits of a family newspaper. It's steamy enough to make one wonder if Supreme Court decisions ought to be allowed through the mails.

Besides providing clear and present danger to the dignity of the Court, Rehnquist's decision made curious law and legislated irrelevant standards of morality.

In true evangelical fashion, Rehnquist catalogues the now-outlawed sex activities in California bars as though he were the first to discover their existence. His prose is replete with Elmer Gantry wowerisms. "Bacchanalian revelries" after all, is not the most detached, unprophetic phrase one expects in a document of the highest federal solemnity.

Rehnquist then spent most of the rest of his decision searching for a loophole, conceding that the First Amendment condones all that "sordid" activity in public.

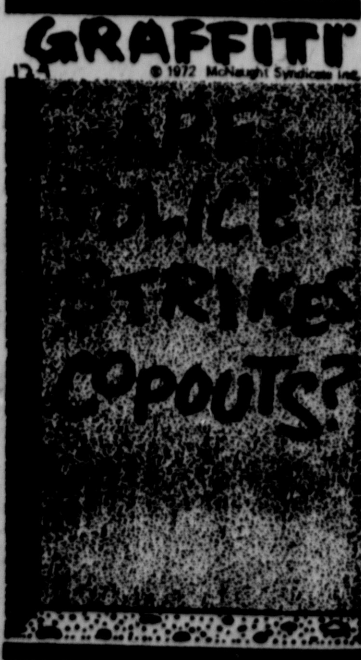

But eureka, says the Justice "the state regulations here challenged come to us not in the context of censoring a dramatic performance in a theater, but rather in a context of licensing bars and nightclubs to sell liquor by the drink."

Then, going back to the afterthought of 1933, he concludes that "the broad sweep of the 21st Amendment has been recognized as conferring something more than the normal state authority over public health, welfare and morals." Demon Rum is re-discovered.

In the post-Rehnquist era, the public health at least may be better off. The juice bars of today undoubtedly offer more Vitamin C than the speakeasies of F. Scott Fitzgerald's time.

One can hear the barker now at a place like The Forbidden Fruit, a New York juice bar investigated by Julie Baumgold: "Right here on our wheat germ display case, ladies and gentlemen, direct from the citrus groves in Florida, Miss Grapefruit Pappas, the healthiest exotic dancer in town, without pits, seeds or inhibitions."

There may be sensible ways of legislating public morality, but Rehnquist and his colleagues may discover that reviving the Volstead Act isn't one of them.

NEW YORK (The Sunday Freeman) — I think she got the transcript to reach agreement with Le Duc Tho, chief negotiator for North Vietnam in Paris, and you were meeting with Nguyen Phu Duc from South Vietnam. Get it?

RMN: (sighing): Yes, Henry. HK: Then there's Ngo Cong Duc, the neutralist and...

RMN: I GOT IT, HENRY! HK: Sorry. Anyway, the North has agreed to accept Phan Dang Lam...

RMN: Really?! The Foreign Minister? I thought they hated him. HK: No, no. The Foreign Minister is Tran Van Lam. This Lam is Saigons' chief negotiator, Phan Dang Lam.

RMN: Oh. Are those the two I got confused the other day? HK: No, the other day you confused Ah Shoo...

RMN: Never heard of him. HK: Sorry, that was a sneeze. I've got a cold. You confused Nguyen Van Huyen and Tran Van Tuyen. The first is chairman of the South Vietnamese Senate and the second is leader of the Nationalist Party.

RMN: Doesn't President Thieu's name also begin with "Nguyen Van"? HK: Yes, and so does General Nguyen Van Minh, Region III commander.

RMN: Is he the one they call "Big Minh"? HK: No, that's General Duong Van Minh, former chief of state, who took over from Premier Ngo Dinh Diem.

RMN: Mmmmm. Well, back to the coalition. Who else besides what his name Lam will be the North accept? HK: "Big Minh" is OK. Also Van Huyen and Van Tuyen...

RMN: I was afraid of that. HK: ... and three other top officials, Nguyen Xuan Phong, Tran Kim Phuong, Ngo Quang Truong...

RMN: Phong, Phuong, and Truong! You're joking! HK: What do you mean?

RMN: Don't you see what they're doing, Henry? They're playing namesmanship. One Lam but not the other. Huyen and Tuyen, Truong, Phuong, Phong. The State Department will never get them straight. Nobody will. It's a cunning blueprint for chaos and eventual Communist takeover.

HK: Himmel! You're right! That explains why I've been so confused recently. I thought it was jet lag and stale air in those nightclubs, but all the time I've been verzauberned and knifed and betrugened und...

RMN: Enough German.

Henry. Now what will we do? Byrnes. Byrd. Byrd. Evans. We can't say the seven men Evins, Ervin, Mathias, Mathias, are unacceptable because of Mathis, Mitchell, Minshall, and Mizell.

HK: Wait! There's a way to make the point indirectly and force them to change. RMN: How?

HK: You appoint a negotiating team made up of congressmen to serve under me. We can put the North Vietnamese on the ropes in a couple of weeks.

RMN: Really? HK: Yes. Here's the team: Burtleson, Burlison, Byrne, Gesundheit. And good night.

RMN: Henry, I think you've got it! I'll arrange it right away. Now you'd better get to bed. You must be tired after all that travel. How are you feeling, by the way?

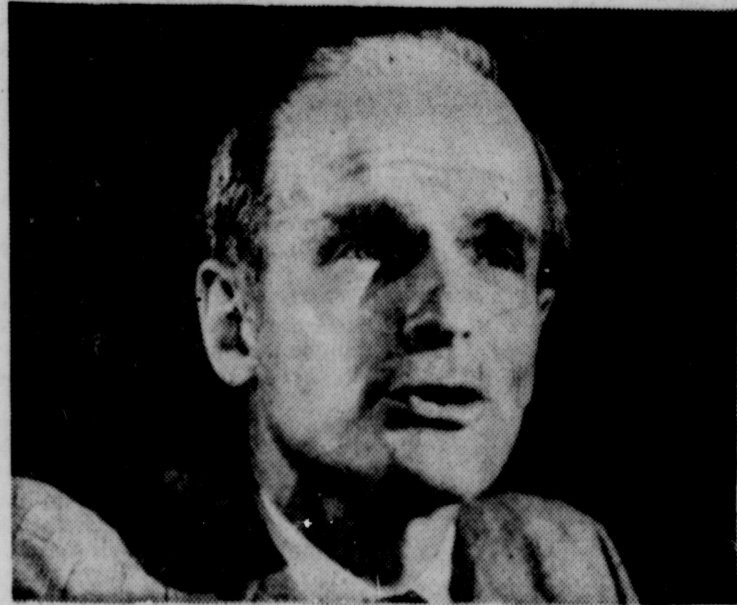

HK: OK, except for this lousy cold. Ah THIEU! RMN: Was that a curse of a sneeze?

The Gossip Column by Robin Adams Sloan

SUSAN OLIVER

SEN. PROXMIRE

Q: A friend told me that Curt Jurgens is down and out and living somewhere on the fringes of Hollywood. Is this true? — C.Z., Roanoke, Va.

A: Curt Jurgens is alive and well and living in grand style all over the world. He's got five, count them, five fine homes — a beach house on a private island in the Bahamas, an apartment in Paris, a chalet in Gstaad, a farm in the south of France, and a mansion in Vienna. Jurgens and other movie people are considering buying homes on an island in the Indian Ocean. He's still married to his French wife Simone, although he did have a brief fling with the daughter of a Brazilian diplomat a few months ago.

Q: Is singer Jack Jones still seeing that British actress? — G.G., New Brunswick, N.J.

A: Jack and Susan Oliver are absolutely inseparable. She's in the audience when he sings and they blow kisses to each other. Sweet!

Q: Your comment on Senator Proxmire's hair transplant and his health regime makes him sound like a fanatic. Does he actually have any real power in the Senate beyond his power for publicity? — G.R., Boston.

A: Yes, the Senator has seniority — chairing and sitting on several important committees. He also has power because he is increasingly noticed by the media. Proxmire is colorful and his jogging through Wisconsin, his push-ups, his Zen Buddhism, his health foods, and his 18-hour days make good copy. Incidentally, the Senator's hair transplant seems to have worked and has improved his appearance tremendously.

Q: Did the film director Luchino Visconti die after his stroke? I liked his work on "The Damned." — E.R., San Francisco.

A: The tempestuous Visconti, who also directed "Rocco and His Brothers" and "Death in Venice," was making a film about the life of Mad King Ludwig of Bavaria when he was struck by a stroke. But he is recovering and has regained the use of his arm and leg and is now cutting his film on Lake Como. Friends say, "He has started to shout and yell again, so that is a good sign."

Q: You occasionally mention Hayley Mills in your column. What about Juliet, her sister? — E.C., Fort Worth, Texas.

A: Juliet is separated, though not yet divorced, from her American husband, Russell Alquist. Right now she's in Italy with her current love, 40-year-old Alessandro von Normann, who is head of production for Carlo Ponti. The actress says she's too soon to talk about recovering and has regained the marriage as they are both still married to other people.

Q: Can you tell us what happened to Princess Soraya? She was the one the Shah of Iran divorced because she did not give him an heir. — P.H., Little Rock, Ark.

A: Soraya is recovering from the death of her longtime Italian director friend. She spends most of her time in Paris and is seen frequently with Arnaude de Rosnay, a 27-year-old photographer, claiming "he is the only man able to make me laugh." Soraya recently fled a party in tears, with Arnaude chasing after her trying to comfort the sad but rich ex-Princess.

Modena Woman Serious After Crash

MODENA

A 47-year-old Modena woman was listed in serious condition at Kingston Hospital Saturday night following a one-car collision on Route 208 in the Town of Gardiner earlier in the day.

Highland State Police said Karla VanName was injured when she lost control of her vehicle after it had gone off the right side of the highway south of Jenkinstown Road. The car crossed the highway and stuck an embankment on the Henkels car then went down a 20-foot embankment and struck a tree, authorities noted.

Two persons were injured in a collision on Route 28 in the Town of Shandaken Friday afternoon. Sheriff's deputies said a car being operated by Max Henkels, 69, of Deerfield Road, Boiceville, was in collision with a vehicle operated by Russell Stewart, 39, of Upper Boiceville Road, Boiceville.

Henkels apparently lost control of his vehicle after going off the right side of the road, deputies said, and crossed into the path of the Stewart vehicle. Both were released after being treated at Kingston Hospital Saturday.

Ellenville State Police, meanwhile, reported that John Steinbeck, 26, of New York City was arrested for driving while intoxicated and driving while his license was suspended after receiving minor injuries in a one-car mishap on Route 209 south of Ellenville Friday night.

Three Kingston men were treated and released from Kingston Hospital after being injured in a one-car crash on Route 209 near Sawkill Road Saturday afternoon. Injured were Thomas M. Stisi, 27, of 89 Cedar Street; Randy Elliott, 18, of 154 Henry Street and James Taylor Jr., 18, of 4 Clinton Avenue. Police said the vehicle was proceeding at an "extreme high rate of speed" when the driver, Stisi, lost control and collided with a metal guide rail in the north bound lane.

Stisi was arrested for driving while intoxicated and driving while his license was revoked. Elliott, who owned the car, was arrested for permitting unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle. Hurley State Troopers P.W. Sheehan and G.R. Van Allen investigated the mishap.

C-E Foes Fight Request

NEW YORK (AP) — Operation of Consolidated Edison Co.'s Indian Point No. 2 nuclear power plant without water-cooling safeguards would cause a $40-50 million loss in the annual striped bass fishing industry, a conservationist said Saturday.

"If the worst of our fears comes true and if Con Ed is allowed to operate this plant, you can kiss goodbye to one half of the striped bass on this coast," said John R. Clark, senior associate of the Conservation Foundation.

He commented at a day-long conference sponsored by the Hudson River Fishermen's Association and two student chapters of the American Institute of Biological Sciences.

Clark discussed an Atomic Energy Commission report prepared by Dr. C.P. Goodyear on the power plant situated on the Hudson at Buchanan, N.Y.

Goodyear's report noted that, contrary to previous theory, 80 per cent of the Eastern Seaboard's striped bass spawn in the Hudson, not in Chesapeake Bay. They are harvested commercially and taken by sportsmen.

Warm river water, expelled from the plant after being used "automatic fish trap ... at a critical stage in the development of the stripers," Clark said.

"The little fish are attracted to the warm water," he said. "They think of spring and flow, and they get carried up by the warm water and sucked into the plant. They are impaled on the screen where they suffocate."

The fishermen at the conference, many of whom are members of the Save Our Stripers (SOS) organization, are demanding that Con Edison install a closed-circuit cooling tower, which would assure that water returned to the river would be of normal temperature.

Some 250 fishermen from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Rhode Island attended the meeting agreed to set up a non-profit trust to promote the well-being of their favorite fish.

Jane, Hayden To Say 'I Do's'

ROEROS, Norway (UPI) — American actress Jane Fonda, a harsh critic of the U.S. war in Vietnam, said Saturday she will marry Tom Hayden, one of the members of the radical "Chicago Seven" antiwar group.

Miss Fonda will conclude her last scenes for the Joseph Losey movie, "A Doll's House," here next week.

Miss Fonda and Hayden appeared at the campus of the State University College at New Paltz and at Kingston's Municipal Auditorium Sept. 18 as part of a nationwide speaking tour against the war in Vietnam.

The 34-year-old actress who toured North Vietnam earlier this year, will marry Hayden as soon as her divorce from French director Roger Vadim is final, she told newsmen.

The marriage will take place in the United States, she said. Hayden was convicted of conspiracy in connection with protest disturbances at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1968.

Hearings Set to Begin On Purchasing Practices

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Six days of public hearings begin Tuesday before the State Investigation Commission (SIC).

The mayor said he was "not at all" concerned with what the investigation might disclose and noted that similar probes had been conducted in the 1920, 30s, and 40s when a Republican was governor and the Democrats controlled the Albany city or county government.

Corning, a Democrat, has been mayor of the state's Capital City for 31 years and is a member of the Democratic Party organization headed by Daniel O'Connell that has controlled Albany County politics for almost four decades.

The SIC investigation began last June when the panel disclosed it has found evidence of "possible fraudulent practices" by a major supplier of goods to the city.

The SIC has sought a Supreme Court order to have Mrs. Mary Dillard, the city purchasing agent, testify before the commission but her lawyer and Corning have said she is too ill to undergo SIC interrogation.

The investigatory commission has no power to prosecute but its findings may be used for civil and criminal actions by the district attorney.

Damage to a boiler at the Roseton Electric Generating Plant early Friday morning will result in an "undetermined period of delay" in opening the new generating unit, Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation has announced.

The new 600,000-kilowatt unit in Orange County was scheduled to be placed in service later this month before the mishap.

Damage was due to malfunction of a boiler control system, according to a Central Hudson spokesman.

No injuries were reported. A spokesman said that although it will be several days before the exact cause of the accident is determined, it is not believed to have been caused by an explosion.

Because of the availability of other Central Hudson generating facilities, and the purchase of additional power from neighboring utilities, the delay in opening the new unit will not have an effect on electric service to Central Hudson customers, the utility company said.

Man Dies at Border Crossing, Might Have Been Fleeing Country

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (UPI) — An autopsy was performed Saturday on the body of a man who died at the Champlain, N.Y., border crossing, apparently trying to flee to Canada to avoid trial in Ohio on charges of practicing medicine without a license.

Officials awaited tests on internal organs to determine if the man had taken his own life, as was believed.

The man, reportedly a native of Ceylon, was identified by immigration officials as Vijay A. Koditvakkum. An alternative spelling from medical authorities in Ohio had the name as Vijay A. Koditvakkum. His original hometown was still undetermined.

The body was taken to the Plattsburgh Medical Center Friday when the man died after getting a drink of water at the Champlain station.

Richard Ahern, director of the Immigration office in Cleveland, Ohio, said "We feel that he must have taken something." A vial, believed to contain digitalis, was found with the body. The man had been denied entry into Canada because he lacked proper identification, authorities said.

He was scheduled to go on trial in Cleveland Monday on charges of impersonating Dr. Uday Gupta, an Indian physician on the staff of a New York City hospital.

At Champlain, he reportedly carried a passport with Gupta's name.

The man had been arrested at Parma Community Hospital in Ohio Nov. 28 when the Cleveland office discovered he lacked a medical degree. Using fictitious credentials, he reportedly had held jobs at three other hospitals in Ohio since 1970.

CSEA Defeats Challenge

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The independent Civil Service Employees Association, attacked by some labor professionals as a "company union," has handily turned back a challenge by an AFL-CIO union for its right to represent 78,000 state workers, it was announced Saturday.

The Public Employment Relations Board reported the CSEA won the election among some 34,000 professional, scientific and technical workers by a 2-1 margin.

The vote was 13,524 to 6,212 for the Service Employees International Union. Although the SEIU had threatened beforehand to challenge the results in court, there was no immediate word if it would begin legal action.

Saturday's results paralleled the CSEA's 3-1 victory margin Friday in the unit for 44,000 institutional workers.

CSEA President Theodore Wenzl immediately hailed the twin victories as "giving us a very strong arm at the bargaining table" in upcoming contract talks with the Rockefeller administration.

"The employees have given us the ball, and we're prepared to run with it," Wenzl said in a statement.

Although state workers have enjoyed a substantial increase in salary and benefits during Governor Rockefeller's 14-year administration, the SEIU attacked the CSEA's record during the recent fiscal crisis.

The union won a 5% per cent raise this year, but only after a 40-hour strike during Easter weekend and by giving up the annual increments which meant automatic raises for employees.

It also had to start legal action against a $5 monthly parking fee imposed on most workers. The challenge is still pending.

Indications were, however, that most state workers feared the switch to a potentially more militant union. Each side admitted to spending about $250,000 in the contest. The SEIU reported getting 36 field workers assigned by AFL-CIO President George Meany in the last three weeks of the campaign.

Grandfather Clock Preview

FAIRHOPE, Ala. The return to solid fundamentals in American life has brought about a resurgence of interest in all that is traditional in our heritage.

One of the most traditionally American of these heritages pieces is the grandfather clock — a crafted with nostalgia and enjoying a spectacular resurgence all its own.

This symbol of the unchanged values upon which this country was founded puts forth a feeling of stability and a continuity of family life as it is handed down through generations. The grandfather clock strikes some long-neglected chord in solid American citizens and fulfills a yearning to own a traditional symbol of American heritage.

Leading the way in this revival of interest in the grandfather clock has been Emperor Clock Company of Fairhope, Ala. Founded in 1968 with an investment of $4,000, the company now sells between 3,500 and 5,000 clocks a month.

A preview showing of the Emperor Clock Company's grandfather clock will take place today, Monday and Tuesday at the Holiday Inn, Route 9 at Sharon Drive, Poughkeepsie. The showings are scheduled from 1 until 9 p.m. daily.

According to Emperor President George Fowler, "Modern production methods enable Emperor Clock to market stately grandfather clocks at about half the usual selling price in conventional outlets."

Many people today are finding pleasure in handcrafting their own home furnishings. Because of this fact, Emperor Grandfather clocks are available in three different ways direct from the company: Fully-assembled finished clocks, assembled but unfinished clocks and unassembled kits for do-it-yourselfers.

These grandfather clocks are handsome pieces of furniture housing finely made clockworks imported from a century-old firm in West Germany. Emperor Clock craftsmen use solid native black walnut or Honduras mahogany for the clock cases.

Interestingly, the name "grandfather clock" dates back to about 1876 when a song by Henry Clay became popular with the line "My grandfather's clock is too tall for the shelf."

Prior to this time, the clock was referred to as a "long case clock," and dates back to the mid-17th Century.

The watchmaking industry began in America in 1830 with the pillar case clock. Until then, wooden parts were used instead of metal, since brass was scarce.

Craftsmen followed English tradition in making the long case clock, and around the middle of the 19th Century the clocks began to be mass produced.

Grandfather clocks are heirlooms that recapture the feeling of America's past. They grow in value and survive the changes of time and fashion. The increasing numbers of people who are collecting these timepieces give various reasons for their interest: Respect for time, the feeling of personal involvement in ticking away the hours, love of graceful craftsmanship and the desire to have heirlooms now and pass them along later.

Whatever the reasons, one thing is sure — this resurgence of interest in grandfather clocks is on an upswing and it looks like it will continue for a long time to come.

TREAD WEAR EXPECTANCY

Because of variable driving habits and road conditions under which tires are used, it is impractical for Montgomery Ward, and conceivably misleading to our customers, to guarantee any specific number of months or miles of tread wear. We can, however, indicate the wear potential we have built into our tires in terms of service in normal family use. If a Riverside tire wears down to the tread wear indicators during the Tread Wear Expectancy, Montgomery Ward will upon presentation of the tire and evidence of date of purchase replace the tire for the then current price less the following dollar allowance:

Tread Wear Expectancy	Tread Wear Allowance
40,000 miles.....	Prorated on Miles Driven
45 month.....	$13.00
40 month.....	10.00
39 month.....	8.00

33 month.....	3.00

BRIDE AGAIN — Movie star Mamie Van Doren has become a bride for the third time, this time being married to business executive Ross A. McClintock in Las Vegas, Nev. Mamie, 39, was previously married to band leader Ray Anthony and the late Lee Meyers, a minor league pitcher who was killed last year in a traffic accident.

HOSPITALIZED — Former Republican presidential candidate Alfred M. Landon underwent hospital treatment this week for a pinched nerve in his leg. Hospital officials in Topeka, Kansas, said the disorder was not serious and Landon was in good condition. The 85-year-old former Kansas governor fell several times in recent weeks because of the nerve.

WEDS — Marisol Malaret, Miss Universe of 1970, has married Butch James, a sales executive and one of San Juan's top amateur golfers. Miss Malaret now is a vice-president in charge of public relations for the Barbizon modeling agency. The wedding took place in San Juan.

UNDER KNIFE — Actor Walter Brennan, 78, was in good condition at Cottage Hospital, Santa Barbara, Calif., after undergoing abdominal surgery. Brennan was stricken while going to work in his latest film, "The Love Bug Rides Again." Walt Disney Productions said Brennan's role would now be given to John McIntire, former regular on the television series, "Wagon Train."

YOUNGEST GEN. — Astronaut Thomas P. Stafford became the youngest general this week in the U.S. military. A veteran of the Gemini 6, 7 and Apollo 10 spaceflights, Stafford was nominated for promotion to brigadier general in February and confirmed by the Senate in March. He is deputy director of the flight crew operations at the Manned Spacecraft Center.

BALKED — Black militant Stokely Carmichael was refused admittance to Canada this week and was returned to the United States after a lengthy Immigration Department hearing. Carmichael had been invited to Canada to appear on a television program, "Under Attack," but when he arrived at Montreal, Canadian Immigration Department officials declared him inadmissible. Carmichael appealed the ruling but after a "further examination" he was declared an "undesirable alien" and flew back to the U.S.

Heart Transplants Fairly Routine

BY RICHARD HARNETT

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Five years ago the world was astonished by the report that a surgeon had cut the heart out of a dead person and successfully transplanted it in the chest of a living person.

"My God! It's going to work," one of the attending surgeons gasped at the climax of that first operation at Groote Schuur Hospital, Cape Town, South Africa, on Dec. 3, 1967.

Dr. Christiaan N. Barnard had just transferred the heart from the body of Denise Ann Darval into Louis Washkansky, a grocer dying of heart disease.

Since that day — Washkansky lived for 18 days, dying on Dec. 21 — there have been several hundred heart transplants. The Stanford University Medical Center team headed by Dr. Norman Shumway, performed its 50th such operation recently.

Shumway did most of the advance studies for human heart transplant, and it was his technique that Barnard used in South Africa.

While many hospitals rushed to have heart transplant operations when they were a novelty, only Stanford has, for the past five years, devoted the large amount of attention, money and facilities required to develop heart transplant surgery into the fairly routine operation it now is.

Although very few heart transplant patients have lived more than two or three years, the Stanford team believes the operation has progressed from the strictly experimental to "appropriate therapy" for some patients.

Transplants, Dr. Eugene Dong said, speaking for the Stanford team, have "resulted in a group of pain-free, mobile, socially and vocationally rehabilitated patients."

He noted that these heart patients had been very near death when they received their new hearts and were later sent back to their home and jobs.

Of Shumway's 50 patients in the past five years, 18 are still alive. In his presentation, Dong said recent improvements in the technique are not yet reflected in the statistics. He said they indicate that if a patient survives for the first three months after the operation, the odds are better than 50-50 he will survive at least two years.

This, Dong noted, contrasts with the life expectancy of 30 days which these people had before the operation.

Since 1967, much of the furor over heart transplants has dissipated.

A new definition of death based on the absence of brain waves has been widely accepted, replacing the concept that a human being is alive until his heart has stopped completely.

The legal, ethical and physical process of donating parts of the body for transplant has been greatly clarified. Reluctance to donate one's body or to consent on the part of relatives has declined.

The Stanford physicians emphasize that a transplant is not an answer to everyone with serious heart trouble. Only a fraction of heart patients ever would be considered, and then only if their death was imminent. One man who came from France for the operation was turned away recently because he was not critically ill.

The Shumway team has improved its record of survival by selecting candidates more strictly. Chances are diminished for example, if the patient is over 50 or if he or she has had heart trouble more than five years or if there is high blood pressure.

The biggest problem in transplants is still "rejection" — the process by which the body tries to destroy anything foreign. The Stanford doctors have found that the critical rejection period comes three months after the surgery.

The doctors are still searching for a drug that will prevent the body from casting off the new organ without taking away its ability to reject disease and infection.

A researcher at the Medical Center recently came up with a promising drug for this. It is made from chicken blood, and the researcher says it has worked in experiments with white rats.

But even with the remaining problems, the Stanford team is urging that heart transplants be used more widely as "therapy" for heart patients who are otherwise doomed to an even shorter and less pleasant life.

Dr. Dong, the spokesman, said the alternative, a mechanical heart, is at least 10 years away.

"On the other hand," he said, "heart transplantation is available now, and the need for its wider and appropriate application is urgent."

SEN. JAY ROLISON

A New Era

By HUGH REYNOLDS

POUGHKEEPSIE
Jay P. Rolison Jr., Ulster County's representative in the State Senate for the past six years didn't get elected majority leader of the Senate ("realistically, I didn't have a chance") but he thinks the man who did, Warren Anderson of Binghamton, will signal "a new progressive era in the Senate."

Rolison's name had been bandied about as a "compromise choice" in early conjecture when it appeared that Anderson would have a fight on his hands from Douglas Barclay of Pulaski, leader of a conservative group of senators, but Barclay pulled out on Monday and Anderson's election was unanimous.

One of the first things Anderson did was name a Senate Reform Committee which will report to him by Jan. 3. Rolison is a member of that committee.

"We're serious about reform," Rolison told The Freeman from his law offices in Poughkeepsie. "We expect that Warren Anderson will operate differently (than retired Majority Leader Earl Brydges). We'll be more organized, more efficient, maybe things will be a little more impersonal, in a sense. There wasn't a nicer, warmer guy than Earl Brydges."

Speaking of the Barclay candidacy, Rolison said, "one of the things that Barclay did was to make his point that we have to update and modernize Senate procedures. We need a more orderly consideration of legislation; we have to eliminate the last minute flurry."

Rolison's committee is expected to call for "a more ordered work week."

"We'd like to know what we'll be doing in advance; what legislation is coming up and when," was the way Rolison put it.

As for his "candidacy" for majority leader, Rolison said, "There was never any real possibility that I would assume the leadership. I'm too far down (the seniority) ladder. It's nice to think of, though."

Rolison was elected to office in 1966 when Ulster County was joined to Dutchess County. He was reelected last month in his new district, which took him out of Ulster, by some 51,000 votes. That plurality puts Rolison number one among Republican senators in the state and number three in the plurality ratings in the entire 60-member senate. "Two Democrats from New York City ran ahead of me," Rolison says.

He also says that Anderson has made no commitments on committee assignments in the State Senate, so Rolison doesn't know what committees he'll be serving on next year. "That's what I liked about the man," Rolison said. "He didn't try to buy the job."

Rolison currently chairs the committee on authorities and is a member of the judiciary and codes committees.

Ulster County is now represented by two (Republican) State Senators, Richard C. Schermerhorn of Cornwall and Edwin E. Mason of Hobart.

Leaders Hopeful

By GEORGE GALLUP

Copyright, 1972, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Republication in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with written consent of the copyright holders.

PRINCETON, N.J.

Life will be better in the year 2000 for the common people throughout the world. This is the judgment of leaders in 75 nations of the world who took part in an international leader survey conducted by the Gallup Poll.

Optimism about the future prevails, as the response to this question indicates:

Will life generally be better for the mass of people in your nation in the year 2000 than it is at present — will it be better or worse?

Pct. Life will be better 64
Life will be worse 15
Life will be the same 15
No opinion 6

Survey respondents were selected from the "International Who's Who," "The International Yearbook and Statesmen's Who's Who" and the "Marquis Who's Who." Among the 265 world leaders who participated were: statesmen and diplomats, elected and appointed public officials, educators, scientists, corporate executives, economists, bankers, physicians, attorneys, media executives.

There were no responses from Russia or mainland China.

While most of the leaders look for substantial gains in population during the last 28 years of this century, the majority of those polled (74 per cent) believe that food supplies will be sufficient to provide for the increased population.

Estimates as to the population growth of their own countries during the next 28 years range from a modest increase of about 20 per cent — among leaders in such nations as Ireland, Norway, France, Finland and Great Britain — to a staggering 100 per cent increase or more in such nations as Brazil, the Philippines, Egypt, Peru, Bolivia and Colombia and most of the developing nations.

One reason, perhaps, why leaders perceive that life will be better in the year 2000 is their belief that the hours of work each week will be drastically reduced.

The political winds of the world are expected by world leaders to blow leftward, as indicated by the results of the following question:

Compared to the present, which will be more widely accepted in the year 2000, the conservative or the liberal viewpoint?

They responded in this manner:

Pct. Conservative 18
Liberal 76
No opinion 4
No answer 2

Those who participated in the survey were asked which nation of the world, in their opinion, would be the leader in the year 2000 in each of five areas: science, culture, military strength, standard of living and quality of life. Their answers:

SCIENCE: The United States wins top place easily. Germany and Russia are next, but far behind.

CULTURE: France gets the largest number of votes, with Great Britain receiving the second largest. The U.S. is third, Russia fourth.

MILITARY STRENGTH: Russia and the U.S. get exactly the same number of votes, with no other nation coming close.

STANDARD OF LIVING: The U.S. receives as many votes as all other nations combined. In second place, but far behind, is Germany with Japan third.

QUALITY OF LIFE: Great Britain receives the most votes, France is second, the U.S. third, Germany fourth.

Ellenville Tops New Paltz In UCAL Hoop Opener

NEW PALTZ young Huges. With hot-shooting Leon Ware, Ellenville High opened the UCAL basketball season in the victorious fashion here Saturday night by downing the New Paltz Huguenots, 75-49.

In a game postponed from Friday night, Ware connected for 31 points to lead the Ellies' attack. Heavily favored before the contest, Frank Muller's Blue Devils showed why with a display of speed and shooting that matched their size advantage on the court. While 6-6 Rick Kaplan clogged up the middle, Ware, with help from Ray Younger and Al Steele, shot the winners to a 36-16 halftime advantage over the stretched out their halftime lead and cruised through the last two periods.

Mike Clinton, the only returnee back for New Paltz, paced the losers with a 14-point night. Ed Siani, a senior in his first starting role, added 12.

While Ellenville lived up to its pre-season notices, New Paltz was experimenting with its new look.

"I'm disappointed, but optimistic," said Davis. He found some solace in his team's defensive effort. "I thought we rebounded well, and our press worked. At the end of the game the press gave us the ball 10 times and we made only two baskets."

With a one-game jump on the rest of the league, the Huges and Ellies will continue the schedule on Tuesday. New Paltz goes to Highland to meet a Big Blue team also in the rebuilding stages with the hope that their first lesson can help them even their record.

Ellenville will be at home against Northern Division darkhorse Wallkill.

Cowboys Trip Skins, 34-24

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — Craig Morton, doing his Roger Staubach imitation, scrambled to throw one touchdown pass and ran 14 yards for another Saturday while Calvin Hill surpassed the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season and Dallas' defense held off a last half Washington blitz to whip the Redskins, 34-24.

The victory boosted Dallas into the post-season playoffs for a record seventh straight season.

It was only the second loss of the season for the Redskins, who played all day without the services of the National Football League's leading rusher, Larry Brown.

Dallas rushed to a 28-3 halftime lead on the heroics of Morton, Hill and Walt Garrison, but had to withstand a Washington surge in the second half that saw quarterback Bill Kilmer throw three touchdown passes.

The game was not wrapped up until Toni Fritsch kicked a 26-yard field goal with 3:25 to go in the game. That score was set up by Charlie Waters' interception of a Kilmer pass.

Hill, who became the first Cowboy ever to go over the 1,000-yard mark in a single season by rushing for 111 yards on 24 carries Saturday, opened the day by scoring on a 10-yard run and then caught a 26-yard touchdown pass from Morton. Morton broke a tackle on that play to roll out just like Staubach enjoys doing to find Hill in the open.

Garrison, who rushed for 121 yards himself, then scored on a 25-yard bolt up the middle and Morton finished out the first half by scrambling into the end zone on a 14-yard run set up by a 41-yard sprint by Garrison.

Washington's only first half points came on a 16-yard field goal by Curt Knight, but in the second half Kilmer hit Charley Taylor with touchdown passes of 10 and 6 yards and also hit

Roy Jefferson with a scoring toss of 10 yards.

That reduced the Cowboys lead to seven points, but Dallas put the game out of reach with Fritsch' second field goal of the second half. He had earlier kicked one of 36 yards.

Dallas, clinching the wild card position in the National Football Conference, will meet the winner of the Western Division — either Los Angeles, Atlanta, or San Francisco — in the first round of the Super Bowl playoffs.

Washington will meet the Central Division winner — either Detroit, Minnesota or Green Bay.

It was the first time in Dallas' history that the Cowboys had put two running backs over the 100-yard mark in the same game. Hill's performance allowed him to set a Cowboy single season rushing record, breaking the old mark of 945 yards by Don Perkins in 1962.

The game was marred by several injuries, but by far the most severe was suffered by Dallas linebacker Chuck Howley. The 12-year veteran sustained torn ligaments in his left knee and was scheduled to undergo surgery Saturday night.

Browns Eliminate Bengals

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Don Cockroft booted a 27-yard field goal with 4:18 to play and linebacker Billy Andrews made a game-saving interception Saturday to preserve a 27-24 victory for the Cleveland Browns over the Cincinnati Bengals and eliminate Cincinnati from contention for a "wild card" berth in the NFL playoffs.

Quarterback Mike Phipps shrugged off a first half injury and returned to the game to engineer the Browns to their ninth victory in 13 games and maintain Cleveland's mastery over the Paul Brown-coached Bengals with five wins in their six-game series. Cleveland thus kept its hopes alive for a playoff berth as a "wild card" entry.

Phipps fired touchdown passes of 50 yards to Frank Pitts and 20 yards to Fair Hooker, completing 10 of 24 aerials for a net total of 141 yards. But the Browns needed the goal-line interception by Andrews with 27 seconds to play to save them from a possible defeat. The Cleveland linebacker jumped high to pick off Virgil Carter's eight-yard pass as the Bengals were driving for the go-ahead touchdown.

OUCH! — Quarterback Mike Phipps, unable to pass, ran the ball and then slid to a sitting position when he saw he was to be tackled as Bill Bergey falls across the legs of the Cleveland playmaker. Phipps was forced to leave the game when he suffered injuries in a similar situation, but he came back to lead Cleveland to a 27-24 win over Cincinnati. (UPI)

Knicks Trounce Philly

NEW YORK (UPI) — Walt Frazier and Bill Bradley each scored 26 points Saturday night as the New York Knicks defeated the Philadelphia 76ers, 120-109.

The loss was Philadelphia's 27th in 30 games and left the 76ers with a .100 percentage.

Philadelphia gave the Knicks a tussle in the first period, holding them to a 26-26 tie. The 76ers even went ahead 28-26 at the start of the second quarter when John Q. Trapp put in two foul shots. But the Knicks then went on a 14-2 surge, led by Frazier's six points, and the

Rangers Score, 4-1

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — 12th goal of the season with Billy Fairbairn scoring their second period goals within a span of 1:24, the New York Rangers defeated the New York Islanders, 4-1, Saturday night before 14,665 fans.

Rod Seiling opened the scoring at 15:43 of the first period, firing a 60-footer through Islanders goalie Billy Smith with help from Gene Carr and Pete Stenkowski. The Islanders tied the score 57 seconds later when Brian Lavender backhanded a rebound past the Rangers' Ed Giacomin. Craig Cameron did much of the work in setting up Lavender's goal.

The teams fought on even terms until Ken Murray of the Islanders drew a tripping penalty at 15:23 of the second period. Fairbairn promptly completed a three-way passing play, scoring from in close with assists going to Bobby Rousseau and Walt Tkaczuk.

Fairbairn then put his second goal behind Smith at 17:43, taking a behind the net pass from Ted Irvine and hitting the empty goal when Smith was unable to get back in the net from a previous scramble.

Smith then drew a tripping penalty when he upended Stenkowski and while Murray was serving the penalty for tripping at 15:23 of the second period, Fairbairn promptly completed a three-way passing play, scoring from in close with assists going to Bobby Rousseau and Walt Tkaczuk.

Houghtaling Hurt; Out Six Weeks

The varsity basketball hopes of Kingston High School took a severe nosedive Saturday when it was discovered that star backcourtman Walt Houghtaling had suffered a broken ankle.

Houghtaling, a senior, was expected to be the key performer in the Maroons' first Dutchess County Scholastic League season. He will be out of action six weeks.

The injury was suffered in practice Friday. "I just turned it," Houghtaling said. At first it was believed to be a sprain and Houghtaling was walking with crutches Friday night. But X-rays taken Saturday revealed the break.

The injury is to the right ankle. Houghtaling had previously strained ligaments in that ankle when in junior high school.

Kingston coach Mike Rienzo could not be reached for comment.

Laub Leads PBA Event

HONOLULU (UPI) — Smooth-stroking Larry Laub of San Francisco holds the first round lead in the $35,000 Winston-Salem Invitational Bowling Tournament.

Laub rolled to a slim six-pin lead over Jim Godman of Lorain, Ohio, at the end of the first nine games of match play Friday. Laub fashioned his lead by knocking over 2,079 actual and bonus pins to 2,073 for Godman.

Laub, who has won $36,505 on the Professional Bowlers Association tour this year, won six, lost two and tied one of his nine games while Godman lost his first game, then won eight in a row to close the gap on Laub.

Laub nearly fell out of the lead in the last game when Atsunori Matsuo of Tokyo scored one of his two victories, defeating Laub, 193-138, while Godman was winning one from Mike McGrath of El Cerrito, Calif., 194-176.

Menetrey Keeps Boxing Title

GRENOBLE, France (UPI) — France's Roger Menetrey Saturday retained his European welterweight title when his challenger Sandro Lopopolo of Italy was forced by his managers to abandon after the 13th round because of a cut eyebrow.

British referee Harry Gibbs proclaimed Menetrey, 28, winner of the match after a brief scene of confusion in the ring arising from Lopopolo's refusal to comply with the decision of his managers and the referee. The Frenchman, while not displaying a great class of boxing in the face of the 33-year-old Italian, was leading largely on points when the match was stopped.

$75,000 Clean Air Tennis Classic. Pasarell, forced to three sets for the third time in the tourney, outlasted Ove Bengtson of Sweden, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3, in a 68-minute match. Pasarell faces the winner of the Saturday night semifinal between Pancho Gonzales of Los Angeles and Frew McMillan of South Africa.

Miss Wade, first winner of the U.S. Open in 1968, made fast work of third-seeded Francoise Durr of France, 6-1, 6-2. The English girl played at the top of her game in the 35-minute match and earned a shot at Sunday's $6,000 top prize.

Saturday's night's other women's semifinal brought together Californians Rosemary Casals of San Francisco and Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego.

Pasarell, shooting for the $10,000 winner's purse, took advantage of eight double faults in running through a 17-minute first set. Bengtson recovered to take a 4-1 lead in the second set and even the match.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ken Charles scored 35 points — most of them on long range jump shots — Saturday to pace Fordham to a 78-69 victory over Florida in the final game of a college tripleheader at Madison Square Garden.

A pair of free throws by Mike Jones with one second remaining gave Temple a 66-64 victory over Manhattan in the opener and Neil Jurgenson scored 20 points and grabbed 11 rebounds before fouling out to lead Oregon State to an 82-71 triumph over Long Island University in the second contest.

Charles, hitting on 15 of 25 shots during the game, helped the Rams build a 20-point lead, 69-49, with 8:31 left in the game, but Florida refused to quit and battled back to within seven points, 74-67, with 1:47 before sophomore Kevin Moriarty hit a pair of free throws for Fordham which halted the Gators' momentum.

Florida was paced by Tony Miller and Chip Williams, each with 14 points.

In the second game, Jurgenson scored 12 of his points in the first eight minutes of play as Oregon State built a commanding 22-7 lead. The closest LIU could get after that was nine points in the second half.

LIU's 6-6 sophomore center, Rubin Rodriguez, scored 20 points and had 20 rebounds for the Blackbirds.

Manhattan blew a chance to win the opener when they had possession with 41 seconds left and the score tied at 64-64. The Jaspers, holding for one shot, tried to get the Owls to come out of their zone and when they refused the Jaspers called time out with seconds to go.

Henry Seawright inbounded the ball to Charlie Mahoney as Manhattan prepared to set up a last second play, but Mahoney lost the ball and in the scramble for it he fouled Jones with one second showing on the clock. Jones stepped to the free throw line and calmly sank both shots of a one-and-one situation.

The game changed hands three times in the second half and was tied on 11 occasions.

John Kneib led Temple with 14 points and Joe Newman chipped in with 11. Mahoney paced Manhattan with 17 points.

It's Massachusetts, 35-14

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Massachusetts overpowered California at Davis, 35-14, Saturday to capture the NCAA Eastern Division College Championship in the fifth annual Boardwalk Bowl before a meager crowd of 2,800.

Unheralded U-Mass quarterback Neil Pennington threw a 10-yard scoring strike with 8:20 left in the first quarter and then gathered in a 21-yard pass in the second period on a razzledazzle scoring play from left halfback Paul Metallo to spark his team to a 9-2 record.

California's Little All America quarterback Bob Biggs was spectacular at times but at the same time hurt his club with interceptions. He threw 27 completions in 60 attempts for 388 yards and one touchdown.

One of his four interceptions was picked off in the flat and run back 58 yards for a U-Mass touchdown.

Metallo was the game's leading ground gainer, rushing for 129 yards on 24 attempts, more than double the total ground offense of California, now 6-2-2.

Following Pennington's first touchdown strike in the game, alert Minuteman safety John Healy intercepted a Biggs pass late in the first quarter. Five plays and 27 yards later split end Steve Schubert took an end-around reverse on the California 19 and scampered untouched into the end zone.

Minutes later Metallo faked a sweep right, threw across the field to Pennington, who picked the ball off the top of the turf and walked 21 yards for the score, capping a 12-play, 99-yard drive.

"We started off real well," grinned U-Mass Coach Dick MacPherson, referring to the Metallo-Pennington play which has succeeded each of the four times it was tried this year, twice for touchdowns.

Biggs retaliated with 1:32 left in the half on a 20-yard scoring pass to running back Frank Batick and kept alive an 11-play, 59-yard drive in the third quarter with a 30-yard pass to Batick before running back Joe Mangiaracina piled over from the one.

In the last quarter, Metallo dashed 12 yards off right tackle for six points after substitute quarterback Mark Tripucka Jr. came in for Pennington and engineered a 9-play, 65-yard drive. Two minutes later, with 8:57 to go, cornerback Bob Parrott picked off a Biggs flat pass and ran it 58 yards for the final score.

Grantland Rice Bowl
 BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Quarterback Denny Duron threw two touchdown passes and set up two scoring plays Saturday to help second-ranked Louisiana Tech to a 35-0 shutout of fifth-ranked Tennessee Tech in the Grantland Rice Bowl.

The victory gave Louisiana Tech the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Mid-Eastern Championship.

Duron hit split end Eric Johnson with a 23-yard scoring strike for Louisiana Tech's first touchdown, 13 minutes into the first quarter. The Bulldogs marched 58 yards in six plays to score the touchdown. Danny Norris kicked the conversion to give the Bulldogs a 7-0 lead.

Louisiana Tech linebacker Joe McNeely picked off a pass from Tennessee Tech quarterback Mike Ledford on the Eagles' 31 and rushed for the second Bulldog touchdown. Norris kicked the extra point and widened the Louisiana Tech lead to 14-0 with 8:30 remaining in the first half.

Duron threw a 42-yard bomb to fullback Roger Carr, who rushed to the Tennessee Tech three and set up the Bulldogs' next scoring play mid-way through the second period. Halfback Glen Berteau then scrambled through the middle for the touchdown.

Miss Proell Falls

Miss Behr Wins Slalom

VAL D'ISERE, FRANCE (UPI) — Sixteen-year-old Pamela Behr of West Germany more than matched her father's expectations Saturday by winning a World Cup special slalom ski race in front of the elite of the international circuits.

Her father, Sepp Behr, used to be the German national ski team coach.

Pamela with her victory shared an early lead in World Cup standings with famed Annemarie Proell of Austria, two times cup-winner and winner of the first race this season. Thursday's downhill fighting against a blizzard.

Pamela was joined in top placings by two young French girls in their first World Cup year — Odile Chavin, who finished second and Patricia Emonet, 16 who was third. Miss Emonet, in fact, had the fastest time in the first of the two runs but was two seconds slower than Miss Behr in the second. The blizzard and poor visibility seemed to worry the new young stars less than the veterans' of 20 years old or so. Many of the favorites fell or missed gates.

With four placings in the top 10, the French girls took part revenge over their Austrian rivals who completely dominated the downhill with seven in the first nine.

Today's heavy snow — after such warm weather Friday that the snow began to disappear — disrupted preparations for Sunday's mens downhill, last of the 'Criterion of the First Snow' ski meet here.

The non-stop had to be cancelled in the morning and officials said the race may have to be held Monday.

Annemarie Proell fell in the second run while her big French rival, Jacqueline Rouvier, could manage no better than 19th place.

Britt Lafforgue, the French favorite, finished 12th.

Danielle Debernard, another French hope this year, finished fourth while Monika Kaserer saved Austria's honor with a fifth place. But she was the only Austrian girl in the top ten.

Other leaders were: 6. Judy Crawford, Canada. 7. Toril Forland, Norway. 8. Hanni Wenzel, Liechtenstein. 9. Christine Rolland, France. 10. Christa Zechmeister, West Germany.

who smashed the Gator season rushing record before suffering a knee injury in the third period, scored on a one-yard plunge, and John Williams kicked a 36-yard field goal.

After Johnson's final touchdown for the 14th ranked Tar Heels, Bowden brought the Gators downfield in the final minute to the North Carolina 10. On fourth down, Bowden hit fullback Vince Kendrick at the flag, but Kendrick was ruled out of bounds.

Florida led 17-14 after three quarters, but Johnson climaxed a 68-yard march with a five-yard scoring burst off left tackle with 8:49 left in the game to put the Tar Heels ahead.

Two minutes later the Gators regained the lead 24-20 when Bowden hit Jackson on a 19-yard scoring play to wind up a 67-yard drive. A 27-yard punt return by Phil Lamm put North Carolina in scoring position with 3:39 remaining. The Tar Heels covered the final 41 yards on six plays with Johnson scoring from the six for the winning touchdown.

Moore was held to 40 yards rushing before his injury. But the all-Southeastern Conference back finished the season with 845 yards, breaking the school record of 842 set in 1948 by Chuck Hunsinger.

Kendrick was the game's rushing leader with 131 yards on 19 carries. Johnson gained 61 for North Carolina and regular tailback Ike Oglesby had 67. Bowden completed 16 of 37 passes for 319 yards and two touchdowns.

North Carolina, which meets Texas Tech Dec. 30 in the Sun Bowl, finished its regular season at 10-1, while Florida wound up 5-5-1.

North Carolina drove 80 yards in 14 plays for the opening touchdown in the first quarter. Vidnovic hit tight end Ken Taylor for 15 and flanked Pat Norton for 14 to move the ball to the Florida seven and set up Johnson's first score.

After Williams' field goal, the Carolina defense set up the second touchdown, forcing the Gators to punt from their own 12. The Tar Heels moved 43 yards in five plays before Vidnovic spotted Jerome on the goal line with 4:46 left in the half.

Kentrick bulled 19 yards to ignite the first Florida scoring drive, and Bowden's clutch 19-yard pass to McGriff kept the march going. Moore dived one yard for the score with 58 seconds left before halftime, cutting the Tar Heel margin to 14-9.

Florida took only 92 seconds to gain the lead in the third quarter as Bowden hit Moore for 35 yards and then McGriff made a diving catch for a 26-yard touchdown to give the Gators a 17-14 lead.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Third-string tailback Sammy Johnson scored three touchdowns, including two crucial fourth period tallies, as Sun Bowl-bound North Carolina battled from behind Saturday to edge Florida, 28-24.

Johnson, a 215-pound junior, burst off left tackle for six yards with 1:41 left for the final Tar Heel touchdown in the seasaw contest in which the lead changed hands four times in the second half.

Johnson also scored on two five-yard runs and Tar Heel quarterback Nick Vidnovic hit flanker Jimmy Jerome on a 14-yard scoring toss.

Oneonta Loses In Soccer Final

EDWARDSVILLE, ILL. (UPI) — A goal by Chris Carena and saves by goalie Rick Benben gave Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville a 1-0 victory over Oneonta State University of New York Saturday and the 1972 NCAA College Division soccer championship.

Carena's winning goal came at seven minutes in the second half from 11 yards out. Carena, the Cougar's leading scorer with 12 goals this season, backfooted the ball over the goal line after taking a pass from defenseman Denny Driscoll.

The victory ran SIU's record to 11-0-3, while the Red Dragons now are 16-2-1.

Benben saved his shutout in the first period when he made a sensational stop of a shot by Carlos Camacha in front of the goal. Benben had 15 saves.

Senators Play It by Ear

By IRA FUSFELD

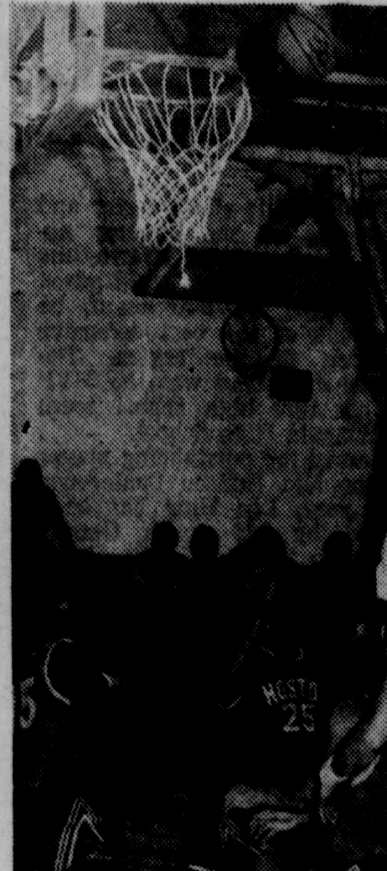

STONE RIDGE
Hostos Community College of the Bronx is so new that its basketball team still doesn't have an official nickname. It also doesn't have that much talent and Ulster Community was able to dispose of the visitors Friday in Senate Gym rather handily, 87-54, even though Coach Mike Perry's quintet yawned its way through the contest.

ONE HANDER—Is Cornelius Brown (21) of Hostos palming the ball in midair? No, he's just trying to tap a rebound to a teammate in Friday's game at Senate Gym. The Senators won, 87-54. (Freeman photo by Haines) half. Ulster has been toying with everyone on the schedule to date and with a stiff test in Rockland coming up at home Tuesday, Perry is hoping the habit can be broken. They think they can't get beat," Perry said of his players. "As a result they're just not getting up for these games. Tonight we led by nine at the half so I yelled at them in the locker room and told them to play a zone in the second half. Then I said, 'Do you have any questions?' They said 'Yeah, we don't want to play a zone,' so I told them Bleep, do what you want."

So the Senators, as if to say "look at what we can do when we want to," went out and blew Hostos off the court . . . and they did it the way they wanted to. Now, that might sound like Perry has no control over his players. But long-time Ulster followers know that if Mike ever quits his job in the physical education field, he can always cross the campus to the psychology department. He's a master at that craft.

HEAD AND SHOULDERS above everyone else is Ulster's Bob Miller (40). Watching are Hostos' Jerry Norris (15), Bill Pierre (25), Bo Diaz (44) and Vic Vargas (11). Miller's shot went off the rim. (Freeman photo by Haines) night, players from both sides, and Ulster was on its way, virtually dragged around the court for 14 minutes. The two clubs combined for better than 20 turnovers in the first half, Ulster owning the larger share, and that helped keep Hostos in the ballgame. There were more than just a few sullen faces in the surprisingly good crowd (considering the weather and the opposition) when Pierre tied the game at 18 with about six minutes left in the half.

That's when the Senators started to come around. Three quick buckets, one by Nixon and two by Ike Chestnut, surrounded a hoop by Joe Hunter of Hostos.

UCCS scored 13 of the final 17 points in the half and led 31-22 at the buzzer. Having decided to play ball in the second half, Ulster left Hostos at the starting gate. Bob Miller, Nixon, Steve Richardson, Richardson again, and Len Clemons gave UCCS 11 quick points while Hostos was answering with only a pair. The score jumped to 42-24 and the subs started filtering in.

Those subs, by the way, were impressive again, showing that Perry does have depth if any of the first liners get into foul trouble in an important game. The favorite of the fans appeared to be Ellenville High School grad Ed Younger, who popped in seven points and dashed around the court with a display of blazing speed. Charlie Turane, Dave Smith, and Chestnut also were sharp. Coleman Link, UCCS's big man, didn't suit up for the game. Perry choosing to rest the center's strained knee. He's expected to be ready for the appearance of Rockland with Wade Pittman and Larry Frazier, formerly of Newburgh Academy, on Tuesday.

The Senator's are heading into the stiffer phase of their very tough schedule. Following Rockland, it's home against New York City, away at Westchester, and home to Sullivan. That should reveal what kind of team is trying to defend the Regional title.

This Time Around UCCC Has Leaders

By STEVE KANE

STONE RIDGE
Henry Nixon and Jackie Knowles are co-captains of the Ulster County Community College basketball team, and right away that should tell you something about the Senators. Last year they were only alternating game captains during the season, but now Ulster has some leaders. The familiar faces in UCCC's new look also include Coleman Link and Val Williams, the third and fourth holdovers from the best Senator team ever. Surprisingly enough, they'll all tell you one of their biggest problems this year is a lack of experience.

success story. Many games were broken open with a few bombs by Gary McDonald or a key steal from Walter Lloyd. Who can fill those gaps? "Turane," stated Jackie, "and Eddie Younger is coming along." Is this team as fast as last year's? "Overall we're faster," answered Henry. "Before we were slow in certain spots, but now everybody can move." And you're bigger. "Yeah, that's right." What does it mean to have played in the national tournament and then walk out on the court and play against someone who doesn't know what it's all about? "It makes you play harder," said Jackie. "We want to do it again." That made Henry stop lacing his sneakers. "It's like we play for respect. We don't go out there and win for the school or any of that, man. We just want to prove that we're the best team on the court." Link was the Senators' lone big man last season, a load he learned to carry pretty well. Though Ulster now has six straight wins this year, Link hasn't really made his presence felt so far. "I'm just off to a slow start, and I really can't explain it. We haven't really played any tough teams yet, that's good in a way because it gives everybody a lot of playing time, but it's hard to play well against someone who doesn't make you play defense." Val Williams is not the most popular Senator among his teammates — in scrimmage, that is. The bearded Valentino is noted for his animalistic tendencies when he plays defense. Asked if his offensive abilities have improved, he deferred to his teammates: "Ask them. They know." "Yeah," added Henry, "he really is." Facing this year's Senators is a schedule that would make any team wince. Getting things together in time to conquer it is going to be quite a task, but Knowles, for one, is eager. "I like the pressure, and we've got the regionals here so we'll have that edge." Do you like being number one? "We are number one," said Henry. Would you ever run up a score to try to improve a rating? "We don't care about the scores, we just go out to win," answered Jackie.

Harness Horse of the Year Albatross Named

COLUMBUS, OHIO —Dancer trained both Albatross and Super Bowl . . . a near unanimous choice for "Three-Year-Old Trotter" and "Trotter of the Year." Both Albatross and Super Bowl have been retired and will stand at stud in conjunction with the U.S. Trotting Association in conjunction with the U.S. Harness Writers Association. The 4-year-old pacer, who has earned more money and raced faster than any Standardbred in history, received 16 of the 191 votes cast with stablemate Super Bowl a distant second, and the choice of 48 voters. Stanley man's Park's five-eighths mile track. He also posted the best clocking on a half-miler, 1:55 and three-fifths, at Delaware Ohio, and his twin 1:54 and four-fifths heats at The Red Mile in 1971 make him the swiftest race winner on a mile track.

The Big Bird retired with a record 36 miles in two-minutes or faster and his lifetime earnings of $1,201,470 are the most for a pacer. During his lifetime Albatross, developed and raced by Harry Harvey until his three-year-old form, won 59 times in 71 starts and only once was worse than third — that a fourth place finish this year.

UCAL Hoop Slate Goes Down Drain

KINGSTON
Everybody's been wondering if the UCAL basketball season is going to rival football. How can it miss? The weather's been just as lousy. You remember football and how it rained almost every week? So what happens once the basketball season is set to get underway? Why it snows and wipes out Friday's first night action. Here's what will happen as a result: Coleman's game at Wallkill will go on January 3. Marlboro will visit Rondout December 22. The night before, Dec. 21, Highland will be at Pine Bush. Sometime in February —they're not sure yet—Red Hook will go to Liberty. And Ellenville at New Paltz . . . that was set to be played last night. Now the UCAL will try to start its season on Tuesday. The debut card (excluding that Ellenville-New Paltz make-up) will be Ontario at Marlboro; Rondout at Coleman; Wallkill at Ellenville; New Paltz at Highland; and Pine Bush at Red Hook.

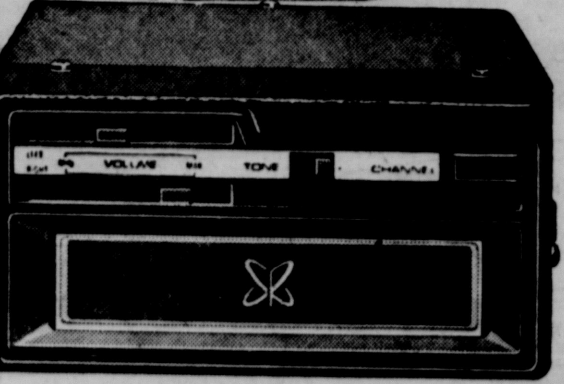

In separate balloting, Albatross, who visited 30 different tracks and won at 27 of them, was named "Pacer of the Year" with Strike Out far back in second with only nine votes. Tarport Skipper received the only ballot against Albatross in the "Four-Year-Old" category. Super Bowl, owned by Mrs. Stanley Dancer of New Egypt, N.J., and Mrs. Hilda Silverstein, New Hope, Pa., had a 190-1 edge in the "Three-Year-Old Trotter" division over Songcan and led the four-year-old Speedy Crown 163-17 in the "Trotter of the Year" voting. Super Bowl, who swept the Triple Crown of Trotting this season and at one time fashioned 18 straight victories is a three-year-old by Star's Pride-Pillow Talk, who wound up his career with earnings of $605,609.

Steelers, Falcons Vie for Playoff Spots

By VITO STELLINO
UPI Sports Writer

The Pack may make it all the way back Sunday while the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Atlanta Falcons, two teams who've never been there, can clinch playoff spots for the first time Sunday in the next-to-the-last week of the National Football League's 53rd season.

The Green Bay Packers, who are a year older than the NFL since Curly Lambeau fielded Green Bay's first team 54 years ago in 1919, have won 11 league titles. But the Pack hasn't made the playoffs since 1967 when Vince Lombardi coached his last Pack team.

That can change Sunday when the Packers invade Minnesota to meet the Vikings, who've won the NFC Central division four straight years since Green Bay's last crown, in a game that is certain to feature frosty temperatures and hard hitting. A Green Bay victory clinches it for the Packers while a Minnesota triumph could create a three-way tie going into the final week of the season.

Pittsburgh, which entered the NFL in 1933, and Atlanta, a comparative newcomer to the league since 1966, also could nail down playoff spots.

All Pittsburgh has to do is beat Houston to clinch a spot while Atlanta is a must beat San Francisco and then St. Louis must upset Los Angeles for the Falcons to clinch the NFC West this week.

Atlanta, with a half game lead in that division, could win it regardless of what Los Angeles does by beating San Francisco this week and Kansas City next week in the finale but the Falcons are still making a longshot bid.

There will be 10 games

Sunday after the weekend of Bay, Pittsburgh-Houston, Atlanta-San Francisco and St. Louis-Los Angeles games, Miami-Dallas, Cincinnati and Washington-Dallas battles.

Besides the Minnesota Green

the slimmest of chances in the Orleans—neither team has a rivalry. Oakland has already clinched a playoff spot while the Jets must win this one and beat Cleveland in its finale to get the AFC "wild card" spot.

If the Jets lose one of their final two games, the runnerup team in the AFC Central will get the AFC "wild card" berth.

Green Bay goes into its game with Minnesota with an 8-4 record to 7-5 for the Vikings. While the Packers clinch it with a win, Minnesota will take the NFC Central crown if the Vikings beat the Packers this week and San Francisco next week.

Detroit can sneak in in the division only if it wins its final two games and Minnesota beats Green Bay this week and then both of those teams lose next week.

Green Bay has been one of the more surprising teams this season while Minnesota has been one of the more disappointing. Despite a 4-8-2 record last year, the young Packers have parlayed a strong ground game and an opportunistic defense into the third best record in the NFC.

Minnesota was supposed to be the team to beat for the Super Bowl this year but despite Fran Tarkenton's fine play, the Viking defense has cracked at times and the offense has been hurt by a lack of a running threat.

Pittsburgh has waited four decades for a winner and the happiest guy in town has to be owner Art Rooney, who has suffered through all the years of losing and now has team on the threshold of success.

Against Houston, the club's main worry is a letdown after the key win over Cleveland last week.

Pro football's wildest race is in the NFC West where Atlanta, S.F. and L.A. are within a half game of each other as the Falcons and the 49ers prepare for their showdown.

GERMANTOWN

If Ralph DelPozzo is the most frustrated deer contest operator in the state this season, can you blame him?

Ralph operates one of the best deer pools in New York State in his Ralph's Sport Shop and would you believe the biggest and prettiest deer rack he saw this season couldn't qualify for the contest. Know why? It was Ralph's own catch — a magnificent specimen, a 10-pointer with a 21-inch rack that dressed out to about 165 pounds!

"It is one of the most beautiful racks I have ever seen," said Del Pozzo a little sadly. "But you know I can't enter it in my own contest. I just never do."

"And, you know what?" he asks, more chagrined than ever. "Every year I manage to enter another contest. This time I didn't. I just couldn't find time."

Del Pozzo bagged his beauty in the Hurley Mountain area, a sector that has produced some of the finest catches of the season.

Leo Janis of Kingston was the winner in the Ulster County division of Ralph's contest. It was a 10-pointer with a 17-inch rack and dressed out about 150 pounds. He downed it in the Slide Mountain area.

A 9-pointer earned Bob Dykeman the Columbia prize. Chris Shaw of Staatsburg led the Dutchess contingent with an 8-pointer and Ed Rifenburgh also had an 8-pointer for best catch in Greene County.

Del Pozzo thought the overall deer catch was satisfactory and anticipated better results next season.

A whopping 12-pointer was brought down in the Mt. Tremper area early in the season but nobody has been able to identify the lucky hunter. A 10-pointer also was bagged in that area.

The good folks at Folkert's in Phenicia described 1972 deer take as "very good . . . better than last year." Like all other check points they agreed that the absence of a doe-season boosted the overall status of the herd.

The no-doe season was a big help, according to Carroll Morris of Carroll's Bait Box on Route 28. "We did see a lot of deer, but an 8-pointer was the biggest that came through here."

Carroll's pointed out that, while the deer catch may have been satisfactory, the Catskill Mountain bear haul was distinctly under par. "We only know of two bear catches in the area," they said. "One of them was an impressive 260-pounder caught by Bob Terwilliger in the Silver Hollow area." Only 15 bear kills had been reported in the Catskills through Wednesday of this week.

The Perks-Swart pool at Saugerties attracted a record 148 entries. On the whole the catches appeared to be on the small side, with little horns.

Jesse Decker of the Flatbush Road felled a 10-pointer in the Flatbush area off Route 32. It dressed out at about 150 pounds.

Mike Spada of Spada's Sport Shop reported that hunters checking through his store had seen plenty of deer this season. Several outstanding racks were noted in the Chichester, Mt. Tremper, Big Indian and Olvera section where hunting pressure was described as heavy.

Where to drill ice-fishing holes . . . best baits and lures and how to fish them . . . how to collect baits in winter. These tips and many more are contained in "Ice Fishing, Secrets to Success," a story by New York State angler Jim Zumbo in the current issue of Outdoor Life magazine.

Zumbo, the forester and fish and wildlife manager at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, says that the ice fisherman's greatest challenge is finding the fish. Oxygen is the key factor. Anglers should look for such oxygen-rich areas at the mouths of the inlet streams, underwater springs, and beaver lodges. Zumbo has hit bonanzas of yellow perch and pickerel by working the deeper waters around beaver lodges.

Drilling holes over fish, however, doesn't guarantee that you'll catch them as witness a contest between Zumbo and Jeff Pavia of Cornwall. Fishing in Orange County's Glenmere Lake, Pavia took 10 yellow perch while Zumbo, working the same holes was skunked. The reason? Pavia's tiny lure had been "sweetened" with a mealworm while Zumbo's identical lure lacked the added enticement.

Zumbo collects some unusual baits in the dead of winter. By accident he found out how to collect masses of large caddisfly larvae. He also captures white wood grubs. He tells how to collect these natural baits and gives detailed instructions on how to build a simple worm box that will yield a year-round supply of earthworms.

Lange Trophy Pro Winner Joins Hunter Ski Team

CHARLES J. TIANO

HUNTER
Lasse Hamre, a 26-year-old Norwegian who stunned the professional ski racing world with his spectacular victory in the coveted Lange Cup Competition at Vail, Colorado last April, has joined the famed Hunter Racing Team representing Hunter Mountain Ski Bowl on this year's International Ski Racers Association (ISRA) tour.

Hamre, a former All-America at the University of Delaware, joins the redoubtable Hugo Nindl, Karl Steufer and Kurt Recher on the Hunter team. All will compete in the 13-step ISRA tour with its overall leader at the end of the season.

The Hunter foursome accounted for $70,093 on the tour last season. Nindl, winner of the four events was the leader with $28,825. Steufer earned $18,662, Hamre, $17,700; and Recher, $4,906.

The tour has been glamorized by the appearance of Jean Claude-Killy, former French triple Olympic Gold Medalist who didn't fare too well in the first two races on the current but figures to get strong a guarantee of professional success. Billy Kidd knows that. He finished 18th on the list last season with a meager $2,681 in earnings.

The ISRA tour is again under the direction of Bob Beattie, ex-coach of the U.S. Olympic team. The remainder of the tour schedule:

January 5-7, Mt. Snow, Vermont; Jan. 26-28, Collingwood, Ontario, Canada. Feb. 2-4, St. Paul, Minnesota; Feb. 9-11, Beech Mt., North Carolina; Feb. 16-18, Boyne Mt., Michigan; Feb. 23-25, Seattle, March 2-4, Bear Valley, California; March 9-11, Snowbird, Utah; March 16-18, Steamboat Springs, Colorado; March 23-25, Sun Valley, Idaho; April 6-8, Vail Colorado.

Steufer, a 25-year-old Austrian, is the current leader (1972-73) after two stops on the tour with 60 points and $5,450 in earnings. He won the giant slalom worth $2500 at Vail. The 6-5 Steufer, biggest man on the tour, racked up 168 points. His $18,662 earnings included $4,000 from Benson and Hedges for his season-long showing the cigarette manufacturers are putting up the bulk of the $300,000 tour fund, with a minimum guarantee of $20,000 for each of the 13-tour stops.

Nindl, of course, remains the top name in the Hunter group.

Professional observers say of Nindl that he can put on his skis and run faster than half the pros can ski off a mountain. He makes up a lot of time between the last gate and the finish line.

Nindl is a very great skier in the flats. He gets his skis moving in the turn and sits so far back in the flats that he just shoots through the gates. When Nindl gets through the last gate he starts to skate and can build no tremendous forward motion. In the Steamboat, Colorado event last season, he was behind his opponent and was able to catch up and win the heat in the 20-meters between the last gate and the finish. It was an incredible feat.

Nindl is one of the best conditioned skiers on the pro circuit. He trains a lot in the summer and fall and is very serious about it.

Joe Hellenschmidt, a 6-3 senior, started throughout last season and returns for a final go-around. He'll be the Sawyer center. The other spots on the first five are still open.

Tony Buono, Bill Maines, and Jim Whiteford have the inside track for the two backcourt places. Buono and Maines, both 5-10, saw some starting duty for the varsity last year. Whiteford, 5-6, did not.

Larry Panella, Scott Emery, and Dave Fuller are the leading hopefuls at forward. Panella, 6

"We are a very young team," 2, was high scorer on last year's junior varsity. Emery, also 6-2, little experience so I really do anticipate some problems at the beginning. I'd say we're pointing to .500 this year. This club may be a year away."

The Sawyers lost not only Koegeel, but good-shooting Tommy Whitaker (now at New Paltz State), ball-hawking Ray Bean, Jim Barbato, Craig Wolsen, Steve Thorton, and Mike Bond.

Only Joe Hellenschmidt, a 6-3 senior, started throughout last season and returns for a final go-around. He'll be the Sawyer center. The other spots on the first five are still open.

Fuller is another story. He started two years ago on the last Jerry Hawkins-coached varsity team and sat out the 1971-72 campaign. He's a rugged 6-1, and his presence is a big plus.

Also on the club are 5-10 Gary Schnell, 6-0 Paul Van Blaricum, 6-0 Scott Wilson, 6-1 Chris Luley, 6-1 Clark Hackett, and 5-10 Tom Hallion.

Height is obviously the missing link on this team. We're going to have to work for the good shot," says Marcus, "because we won't get a second one."

from which he expects the most trouble. The Bulldogs, against whom he plays first, have two 6-5 players as does Ketcham. They should give Saugerties' smaller cagers a solid test.

The Sawyers follow the Beacon game with the Ontario Christmas tournament along with Coleman and Cathedral of New York. Then it's into Kingston High School's Kate Walton Field House on January 5. The return meeting will be Feb. 6 in Saugerties.

The schedule:

Chubby Cherub...the Hottest Thing on Guru Circuit

HARDWAR, India (UPI)—The hottest star on the international guru circuit these days is 15-year-old Maharaj Ji, a chubby cherub who transmits something his transported devotees call Perfect Knowledge.

The young yogi's Divine Light Mission, which has its headquarters in this north India town hard by the Ganges River, boasts 3 million Indian followers and about 100,000 abroad, 50,000 of them in the United States.

Maharaj Ji's devotees are called "premies," which means loved ones.

An estimated 10,000 premies, including about 3,500 young American and other foreign followers, greeted Maharaj Ji at the airport in New Delhi when he returned from New York early in November. The foreign disciples paid $430 each for round-trip tickets that brought them to India on 10 chartered planes, including eight jumbo jets.

In New Delhi they celebrated a three-day festival honoring Maharaj Ji's late guru father, founder of the Mission, then folded their tents and rolled their sleeping bags and came to Hardwar, where they get up each day at 4 a.m., for two hours of meditation before breakfast, one of their two meatless meals of the day.

The premies hail Maharaj Ji, who celebrated his 15th birthday on Dec. 10, as the perfect master and Lord of the Universe. Some of the younger followers claim he has gotten them off drug trips. All say he has changed their lives, irrevocably.

Maharaj Ji took over at the age of 8 as "Perfect Master" when his father died. He said a voice came to him saying, "You are He. You are to continue."

Maharaj Ji said he did not want to become the head guru and would have preferred to be "a mischievous little boy." But he could not deny his duty and at his father's funeral he told the mourners to stop weeping.

"The Perfect Master never dies," he told the flock. "Maharaj Ji is here, amongst you."

That apparently was good enough for his followers, including his mother, now called "The Holy Mother," and his three older brothers, all of whom worship him by kissing his "Lotus feet."

The Mission went international two years ago with a parade through New Delhi with Maharaj Ji riding a golden chariot, trailed by camels, elephants and premies.

The next year he ventured to the United States, where he picked up followers and learned to like American ice cream and horror movies. He also picked up an American accent and such phrases as "freaked out," which he uses when talking of these troubled times, and "really fantastic," which is how he describes his "ultimate world."

Teen-agers in the United States ("premie-teenies") flocked around him, vowing to forsake drugs, tobacco, alcohol and casual sex.

When Maharaj Ji stepped off a jumbo jet in New Delhi before his cheering premies, he looked for all the world a kid with the world in a jug and the stopper in his hand. But there was trouble on the horizon.

A few hours later customs officials leaked the still unproved allegation that he had attempted to bring into the country almost $80,000 in undeclared American currency, precious stones and watches.

The premies said he was being falsely persecuted, just as Jesus Christ had been. They said the alleged contraband was part of the assets of the mission's divine bank and was being held in safekeeping for the owners, all devotees.

Customs officials, presuming are still meditating over the case.

The Holy Mother is bitter. "My son is cursing me for having persuaded him to come to India to attend the Hans Jayanti (Maharaj Ji's late father) festival," she told a newsman here.

She charged that customs officials had humiliated Maharaj Ji and his entourage and that the Indian press had given his visit the worst possible coverage.

The Holy Mother said Indians did not appreciate what Maharaj Ji has done for the country. "Isn't it a matter of pride for India that Englishmen who ruled over this country for two centuries now bow their heads in reverence before the young guru Maharaj Ji?" she asked.

The fact is that some Indian leaders — religious and lay — consider Maharaj Ji a fraud and his mission a gigantic ripoff. A group of religious and political leaders met in New Delhi to demand that the boy guru be examined by a panel of doctors to determine his true age, which they claimed is at least 22.

The 2,500 foreign premies camped out here at the Mission's City of Love pay no attention to the criticism of Maharaj Ji.

Judy Maurer, 23, of San Jose, Calif., said the three weeks she had spent there were "totally ecstatic terms."

The Maharaj Ji had been little seen for awhile and the explanation was he has been ill. "He's having trouble with his liver," said Dr. Edward Hanzlik, of Brooklyn, N.Y., one of the camp physicians and a premie himself.

The man in charge at the camp in the absence of Maharaj Ji was guru Dayalanand, one of the 2,000 or so "mahatmas" said to also have the power to transmit 'Perfect Knowledge'.

Oregon's Correctional... Colors Just a Prelude

SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—Prison walls are no longer drab at Oregon's Correctional Institution.

Visitors first notice that when they drive up to the main control tower and see that each of its eight sides is painted a different pastel color.

And that's just a prelude of what's inside the prison buildings, also painted six different pastel colors on the outside.

Cell doors are painted in bright colors. Cell bars are painted in pastels. Each cell has a different pastel color.

There are inmate paintings hanging in the cafeteria. And there are gigantic "supergraphics" painted in vivid colors on the walls of the 740-foot main corridor.

What's going on here? When the color began to appear, one inmate asked superintendent G. E. Sullivan, "What are you doing, turning this into a fun house?"

The color started to blossom three years ago when Sullivan took over here. But the transformation isn't over yet. "We keep constantly changing to keep this an exciting place to work and live in," Sullivan said. "We hope the institution will never become stale or stagnant, in its colors or in its programs."

Roy Markson, director of group living, and the man who supervised most of the color schemes, said: "Maybe we're not fooling anyone except perhaps ourselves."

But psychologists claim color does control people's moods, Markson said, "and we feel it does have some effect on the overall atmosphere."

Originally the institution, which houses about 400 first-time offenders, was painted green.

"Chantilly green" is what the outside was, according to paint supervisor William Hoskinson. "And inside there were more shades of green—designated by number, not name."

The cell bars now come in soft green, blues and buffs. Some cell doors are done in bright yellow, oranges, greens and blues.

And there's a stairway leading to the clothing room, which has a blinding combination of orange and pink walls. "They painted that one while I was on vacation," Markson explained defensively.

Markson admitted he "didn't know what supergraphics was" until he visited Portland's Memorial Coliseum, where there are some examples the institution has copied. Now 12 of the large patterns and designs done in bold colors are scattered along the 740-foot long main corridor. The walls are 18 feet high, but the graphics are on only the upper 11 feet.

The mechanical drawing and paint students in vocational training do most of the work. Paint supervisor Hoskinson asserts that none of the designs are fixed, but subject to change anytime people get tired of them.

He pointed to a large O surrounded by lightning bolts, directly over the cafeteria entrance. "Everyone says that one's got to go—it gives you indigestion."

The Steak-and-Stage Emporia...Grossing the Dough

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The theater's fastest growing audience first eats together, a wily merger of everyone's yen for the last week of October, according to trade statistics, here were 598 Equity members under Main Stem contract; 634 engaged in resident professional troupes elsewhere; 491 at work in theater-restaurants. Another indication of the galloping growth of eat-and-see establishments that supply comedy after the chicken blueplate, drama after dessert, is that 76 are now operating, compared with 41 last year that used equity players. A number of others come and go without union talent. "Few ever make the transition," Vogel says. "There's no way of counting them."

The steak-and-stage emporia that have been counted take in an estimated annual gross of $30 million, and during 1972 provided 19,535 weeks of work for players. One five-unit chain budgeted theatrical productions at $687,000.

The notion of combining a streamlined version of "Kiss Me, Kate," "Guys and Dolls" or other familiar favorites into a dining package first popped into operation a decade ago at the Meadowbrook, a Cedar Grove, N.J., refectory previously renowned for the big band sounds of Glenn Miller, Charlie Barnett, et al.

The cross-country circuit now stretches from Cedar Grove to Cedar Crest, N.M., from Austin, Tex., to Valparaiso, Ind. "Dinner theaters provide an overall ambience for a family celebration," says Vogel, "and are important to us because they provide year-round employment."

Supplying advice on business aspects of emergent theater enterprises is the reason for FEDAPT's involvement with this particular thespian activity. The agency never has been asked for and never intends to offer suggestions on the culinary end of combined operations. "People always talk about show business," Vogel often remarks of the general theatrical FEDAPT started in the early '60s as a bureau within Actors Equity Association, exploring increased employment potential around the country. This imposed a certain ambivalence because, says Vogel, "Equity is not a proselytizing union."

For greater flexibility in operation and to become eligible for funding from a variety of benefactors ranging from the National Endowment for the Arts to private philanthropies, FEDAPT became an independent organization in 1968.

Problems recurrently brought to it include: Development of stable financial support for the long haul; how to budget; even, how to set up an office efficiently; and of course, how to woo and win spectators.

"A major contrast between theater in New York and practically everywhere else," says Vogel, "is that a repeater audience, as faithful as a pro football team's following, must be created. It has to be developed as carefully as a cast or a production."

"Almost always, people want to move too rapidly when they start something. We generally urge them to go slow until the potential for a permanent following is clearly evident."

The office strenuously tries "to keep away from giving advice on the artistic end."

Two More Plane Victims

GRIM SEARCH CONTINUES

(UPI Telephoto)

CHICAGO (UPI) — Searchers Saturday pulled two more bodies from the wreckage around a jetliner that crashed into a row of homes a mile and a half southeast of Midway Airport Friday, raising the toll of known dead in the crash to 45.

Eighteen other persons were injured when the United Airlines 737 jet plowed through the bungalows and burned.

The jet, which was approaching Midway, was United's flight 533 from Washington, D. C., to Omaha, Neb., with a stop at Chicago. It carried 55 passengers and a crew of six. Seventeen of the injured were on the plane and one person on the ground was injured.

Nearly 24 hours after the crash, only 12 of the dead were identified. Among them was Rep. George W. Collins, D-Ill., who had just been elected to his second term in congress and was on his way home for a children's Christmas party. Many of the bodies were burned beyond recognition and officials said positive identification may take several days.

Investigators combed the wreckage and continued the search for bodies. It was believed that at least one of the homes destroyed by the crash was occupied when the plane hit.

The two bodies found Saturday were removed from beneath the left wing of the wreckage after firemen cut through the wing with heavy duty steel saws.

Witnesses said the plane hit the ground tail down and nose up.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, Neil Calahan, said the jet had been cleared for landing and was making its first visual approach when the crash happened. He said there had been no indication of anything unusual in conversations between the Midway tower and the pilot.

Two passengers who survived the crash with only minor injuries, Harold Metcalfe and Marvin Anderson, both of the Chicago area, said the interior of the plane was dark and quiet after impact.

Anderson tried to open an emergency exit over the wing and Metcalfe helped two stewardesses open a rear exit door, but both had to be closed again because of flames outside the plane. Metcalfe said he and the stewardesses then opened another rear door and most of the surviving passengers apparently left through that door.

Ulster... Rockets

BELFAST (UPI) — Two rockets and several bursts of machinegun fire hit the police station in the border village of Crossmaglen, 50 miles south of Belfast, Saturday, an army spokesman said.

One rocket penetrated the building but damage was light and there were no casualties, he said.

British troops found another Soviet-made RPG7 rocket launcher complete with rocket when they raided a suspected Irish Republican Army (IRA) haven in Belfast.

Soldiers found the rocket launcher and rocket, two rifles and hundreds of rounds of ammunition in a raid on a house near an army barracks in the New Lodge area of Belfast, an army spokesman said.

The spokesman said the launcher had been fired recently, probably in a rocket attack on a nearby police station on Tuesday.

The previous RPG7 seized by security forces was captured in Londonderry on the day the weapons were first used last week.

A young woman carrying a loaded, Russian Armatite rifle hidden down her trousers led police to the rocket launcher, the army said. A patrol asked her to open her maxi-coat and saw the butt of the rifle jutting out of the top of her trousers. She was also carrying part of an army self-loading rifle.

Common banditry has started to replace political idealism and religion as the driving force in Ulster's violence, police sources said Saturday.

Police believe crime is responsible for many of the sectarian killings that have claimed a total of 108 victims and previously appeared motiveless. They said crime statistics support this assumption.

The sources said the gangs involved in the growing crime in the province are from the Provisional Wing of the IRA and Protestant extremists of the Ulster Defense Association. Their loot has come from raids on banks and post offices and from the hijacking of thousands of dollars worth of liquor, which finds its way into the numerous private clubs that have sprung up to replace bombed bars.

The fighting began at 11:30 a.m. when Lebanese army troops opened fire on a guerrilla vehicle that failed to stop at an army checkpoint in the Ein Qenia area of Arkoub, the guerrilla sources said.

One of the vehicle's occupants was killed and another wounded.

The incident was followed by a sporadic exchange of fire between the two sides that lasted for an hour, the sources said.

In Friday's battle, guerrillas said, four of their men were killed and five wounded. An army source said two soldiers were killed and five wounded.

Guerrilla sources said their casualties included a Dutch national who was killed in Friday's fighting. They refused to give more details about his identity.

Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam blamed Friday's battle on a "misunderstanding" and said the incident "despite its enormity has been contained."

Salam called a meeting with a group of guerrilla leaders to discuss measures aimed at defusing the situation.

Government sources in Beirut said an unwritten agreement between the guerrillas and the government reached last September, following a massive Israeli attack against the south, banned the guerrillas' presence in the regions of Tyre, Bint Jbeil and Marjayoun, which lie between the Mediterranean and the Hasbani river.

Heavy Fighting in South

SAIGON (UPI) — American jets bombed Communist supply columns in the narrow waist of Vietnam Saturday while the heaviest fighting in a month raged the length of South Vietnam.

Radio Hanoi broadcast identical statements by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong saying U.S. air raids have "dimmed the prospects for peace in Vietnam."

In Saigon, a newspaper partly owned by President Nguyen Van Thieu's nephew predicted Thieu would expand his cabinet to include anti-Communist parties other than his own in order to give it broader representation in the event of a cease-fire.

South Vietnam has about 15 other parties. None are Communist or pro-Communist. The Communist party is outlawed in South Vietnam.

"Anti-Communist nationalist parties are being contacted," Tin Song said, "in order for their representatives to participate in the new government."

U.S. B52s flew about 100 sorties in North and South Vietnam. Three-quarters of them were concentrated along Vietnam's narrow waist within an 80-mile band divided by the 17th parallel buffer zone between North and South Vietnam. A sortie is one mission by one airplane.

The big B52s, based in Thailand and Guam, have dropped more than 5,000 tons of high explosives in and near the buffer zone since Wednesday. Their targets are concentrations of troops and supply columns moving south in anticipation of a possible cease-fire and weapons freeze.

In the ground war, the South Vietnamese command reported 83 Communist attacks during the 24 hours ending at 6 a.m. Saturday, the same number as the previous day, and the highest since Nov. 12 when 87 were recorded.

UPI Correspondent Kenneth F. Engle reported that 1,208 artillery and mortar shells hit South Vietnamese airborne and marine positions during daylight hours Saturday in Quang Tri, South Vietnam's northernmost province.

More than 1,000 shells a day have plowed into South Vietnamese positions nearly every day since cease-fire negotiations made a breakthrough six weeks ago.

Since then, each side has been trying to seize control of as much land and as many people as possible in the event of a stand-still cease-fire.

oriented policies at home, and cooperation with the United States in foreign affairs.

At stake in today's voting will be all 491 seats in the lower house of the Vietnamese parliament. The Home Ministry said 74.15 million persons will be eligible to cast ballots.

Cool, cloudy weather is forecast, and political observers expect a voter turnout of about 65 per cent nationwide.

Counting of votes will begin an hour after the polls close at 7 p.m. today but the final results probably will not be known until Monday evening.

As in England, the party with a majority in the lower house of parliament controls the government. LDP went into the election with 297 seats, a majority of 51. Public opinion surveys say it will come out of Sunday's election with about 290.

Opposition is fragmented among four political parties, none of which has entered enough candidates to win a majority on its own.

Tanaka, 54, who took office in July, has made the panda his party's campaign symbol to keep voters reminded that he took the popular step of normalizing Japan's relations with China in September.

Opposition parties have concentrated mostly on the problems of Japan's cities—housing, pollution and overcrowded public transportation. They hope to encourage the rapidly growing estrangement of Tanaka's party from Japan's urban voters.

Polls indicated that the Communists and Socialists will make substantial gains in seats. However, these will probably come mostly at the expense of the two middle-of-the-road opposition parties, Komei and the Democratic Socialist Party.

Both the Communists and Socialists strongly oppose the American role in Asia. All newspaper surveys predicted more than 20 seats for the Communists, which would be their best showing since the Korean War era 20 years ago.

Japanese Go to Polls Today

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime power in a general election Minister Kakuei Tanaka is today expected to lead Japan's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party to another majority in parliament and up to four more years in office. The LDP has won every general election since Japan regained its post-war independence in 1952. It favors business-

Three Arrested in Marcos Conspiracy

MANILA (UPI) — Three prominent Filipinos, including the grandson of a former president and the nephew of the current vice president, have been arrested and accused of conspiracy to seize power and kill President Ferdinand Marcos and his family, the government said Saturday.

Information Secretary Francisco S. Taday said arrested members of a "revolutionary junta" had implicated the three prominent men. He said that attempts on the life of Marcos, his wife and three children were expected to continue.

The accused men were identified as: —Sergio Osmena III, grandson of a Philippine wartime president and son of Senator Sergio Osmena Jr., the man Marcos defeated in his re-election bid in 1969.

—Eugenio Lopez Jr., publisher of the now defunct Manila Chronicle, general manager of the Manila Electric Company—the largest Philippine company in assets—son of a millionaire businessman and nephew of Vice President Fernando Lopez.

—Jesus Cabarrus Jr., son of the millionaire president of Marinduque Mining, the Philippines second largest copper mining concern.

Lopez, Osmena and Cabarrus were believed to have been arrested prior to the government announcement Saturday.

Taday said the plans for further attempts on the lives of Marcos' family were discovered after his wife survived an attempt on her life Thursday. Her assailant was shot and killed.

Taday said that following the attack on Mrs. Marcos, police raided 14 hideouts and arrested 85 persons in an effort to prevent more violence.

Brezhnev U.S. Visit Unlikely Until 1974

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet diplomats say communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev's planned visit to the United States may not come until 1974.

When Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko visited Washington this fall both Soviet and American sources indicated Brezhnev's trip would be scheduled for the end of April 1973.

But knowledgeable Soviet diplomats said a preliminary contacts on the visit have been held and that its date is uncertain.

U.S. officials said that there seem to be no major problems which Nixon or Brezhnev could resolve if the Soviet leader came here. However, they added the two leaders will surely discuss Middle East diplomacy and East-West disarmament talks.

night in honor of Soviet and American participants in an East-West conference recently held in Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

There is some speculation that the Soviets may want to postpone Brezhnev's visit until after a congressional decision this year on increasing trade contacts between the United States and Russia. Congress is scheduled to take up legislation that would bar further trade concessions to Moscow until the Soviet Union liberalizes its present "education tax" on Soviet Jews who emigrate to Israel and other countries.

'Life' Dies ... Some Weep, Editor Cries

NEW YORK (UPI) — The managing editor, Ralph Graves, said what everyone there felt: I thank you all for that gift which we gave to each other.

And: "There is nothing I can do to soften this sad blow." The blow to the staff members who filled the big Pontine room of the Time & Life building Friday lay not so much in hearing formally of the death of Life—they had known it was sinking fast—but in the feeling that they had helped make something that had been great and now were helpless to stay its passing.

Some were standing, some of the women weeping, one male editor crying. Andrew Heiskell, the tall, urbane board chairman of the parent Time Inc. and an old hand on Life—he was hired six months after it started—was pale, barely audible and seemed near tears as he helped announce the end would come Dec. 29.

'Tis the Season to Bake a Bevy of Sugarplums

"The children were nestled all snug in their beds . . . While visions of sugarplums danced in their heads . . ."

In that handful of pretty words, Clement Moore captured a child's bedazzled anticipation of "A Visit From St. Nicholas" nearly 150 years ago.

Capture it yourself this Christmas in confectionery. Decorate the jolliest tree a child could hope for with real cookies, colorful sweets so beguiling they leave no doubt they're descended from sugarplums.

This tree-trimming cookie collection includes twinkly stars and fanciful bells . . . happy little gingerbread characters . . . spritz cookies, crisply shaped . . . and pinwheels, spinning with flavor. Meltingly good Old-Fashioned Sugar Cookies, too, and Mince-meat Refrigerator Cookies with their spicy-sweet taste.

Wrap them gaily for very special gifts. Serve them forth to the season's visitors — with cups of cool, creamy eggnog, wonderfully traditional. Wonderfully easy, too, to have on hand and pour right from the dairy carton.

And, of course, save a colorful collection of cookies for the tree. To fashion a centerpiece-size cookie tree, start with a cone-shaped styrofoam base. Wrap it in chicken wire, spray it green with one of the paints for use on styrofoam, and fill with fresh branches. Now insert wooden picks into the styrofoam, and you're ready to hang the cookies.

Arrange your creation in the center of the table and surround with cookies-for-eating as insurance that your cookie tree will remain a wonderful sight to see!

An Open Letter to Mothers . . . From Mrs. Santa Claus

Dear Mothers:

With all the shopping, baking and decorating left to do, the time for Santa's annual visit seems to be approaching much too fast for everyone . . . except the children.

If your children are as excited about Christmas as my little elves, you're probably desperate for anything that'll keep them occupied. Well, I keep the little elves amused for hours by letting them play the Christmas Cookie coloring game.

First begin with the basic butter cookie recipe using real butter to flavor each cookie bite. Chilling the dough before rolling makes cookie cutting Spritz are my favorites because they're flavored with a hint of mint. I add a little green food color to half of the dough to give them a minty tint, too.

Here's the trick to making perfectly shaped Marbled Spritz with the cookie press. Carefully fill one side of the cookie press with green dough and the other half side with the uncolored dough. To get a perfectly pretty cookie every time, place the cutting edge of the disk against the dough. For most presses, just give the handle a reverse half turn after you've pressed the cookie onto the baking sheet. Let your little elves make circles into wreaths and trees into Tannenbaums by adding vanilla. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; gradually add to creamed mixture. Chill for ease in handling. To prepare Cookie Paint: Just before rolling cookie dough, put one egg yolk in each of three small containers. Use a few drops of food coloring to tint one yolk red and one yolk green, leaving one yellow. Cover plant with plastic wrap to prevent drying while rolling and cutting cookies. On lightly floured surface roll cookie dough to one-eighth-inch thickness; cut with floured cookie cutters into desired shapes. Transfer to baking sheets. Using small paint brushes, decorate cookies with red, green and yellow paint. Make additional paint as needed. Bake cookies in preheated 350 degree oven, 8-10 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove to wire rack to cool. Yield: approx. 3-5 dozen.

Marbled Spritz

One cup (two sticks) butter
One-half cup sugar
One egg

One-fourth teaspoon peppermint extract (optional)

Two and one-fourth cups all-purpose flour plus one tablespoon

Green food color

Red cinnamon candies.

In a mixing bowl cream butter; gradually add sugar and continue beating just until blended. Beat in egg and peppermint extract. Gradually add two and one-fourth cups flour to creamed mixture. Remove slightly more than half of dough. Add one tablespoon flour to remaining dough and blend. Blend in scant one-fourth teaspoon green food coloring. Carefully place plain dough along one side of chilled cookie press; fill in other side with tinted dough. This will give a marbled effect when cookies are formed onto cool baking sheet. Use spatula to push dough down in order to eliminate air spaces. (Cookie press works best when only two-thirds full.) Refrigerate remaining dough until ready to refill press. Do not store in refrigerator since chilled dough will "crumble." Use star attachments to form "S" or circles — or use other press designs. Decorate circles with cinnamon candies to look like wreaths. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven, 8-10 minutes. Remove immediately to wire rack to cool. Yield: approx. 8 dozen.

Christmas Butter Cookies

One cup (two sticks) butter
One cup sugar
One egg
One tablespoon milk
One teaspoon vanilla extract
Two and three-fourths cups all-purpose flour
One teaspoon baking powder
One-fourth teaspoon salt easier. To make the Christmas Cookie paint (which always intrigues the little elves) I take three egg yolks and put a little red food color in one, green in another, and leave the third yolk its naturally sunny yellow color. Be sure to cover the paint so it doesn't dry while you and the children cut the cookies into wreaths, bells, trees, and even animal and people shapes. Then give the children the egg paint and a brush, and let them create the happy feeling of Christmas all over the cookie faces. They run out of paint before cookies, just mix up another batch.

The kids will have hours of fun.

Holiday Parties Spoiled by Thievery

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
[© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-
N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: Now that the holidays are upon us, would you please share my unpleasant experience with your readers before it is too late?

Recently my husband and I hosted an "office" party in our new home. There were husbands and wives, some singles and their dates, and all but a few were total strangers.

We decided to confine our party to our huge recreation room area which is completely furnished with bar and rest room facilities.

During the evening we noticed a few guests roaming around the rest of the house on their own. After the party was over, my husband discovered that his wallet, which he had left on his bureau in the master bedroom had been emptied. I noticed later that a few small art objects were missing. We were shocked!

Abby, how can a hostess keep her guests confined to a given party area without insulting them? When the florist suggested putting up "decorative velvet ropes" to indicate where there shall be no trespassing, we were appalled. Now I'm sorry we didn't.

DISILLUSIONED
DEAR DISILLUSIONED: Even "roping off" areas is not adequate protection against a clever thief. It's a pity that thieves must spoil it for the majority. The only advice I can offer is to "know thy guests."

DEAR ABBY: The wife and I are having a disagreement I wish you would settle. Here is our problem: We have trouble meeting our monthly mortgage payments to the extent of always getting behind and having to pay late charges. We both drive old cars that nickel and dime us to death, and we are in back up to our eyeballs, buying everything on credit and trying to keep up with the Joneses.

Our daughter is marrying a young man who is in the chips, so her mother went ahead and laid away a $300 wedding gown, and is planning a wedding like Lyndon Johnson gave for his girls. Jennie Sue is a pretty girl.

Dear Abby

and she doesn't give a hoot for this boy. She is only interested in his money, but my wife says this is one wedding that is going to be the talk of the town. (It sure is, when I file bankruptcy to pay the bills.)

I said, "If this marriage lasts I will be a monkey's uncle, so why don't you just get Jennie Sue a $30 wedding gown and give ten bucks to the preacher and skip the frills and the bills?" Whose side are you on, Abby?

BROKE AND DISGUSTED
DEAR B. AND D.: Yours, if you're telling it like it is. And I think you are.

DEAR ABBY: I was truly saddened to see the letters in your column from readers who wore dentures, because you gave the impression that false teeth were as good as natural teeth.

Abby, artificial teeth, like artificial arms and legs, are a burden that must be borne by many, but no manmade substitute can compare with nature's originals.

We know that dental disease and tooth loss are brought about as a result of organized bacteria accumulating at and beneath the gum margin, and with proper care, the only reasons for further loss are ignorance, accident or total neglect.

If people will brush their teeth properly and faithfully, use dental floss regularly, and see their dentists for periodic checkups, they can keep their teeth a lifetime.

N. C. DENTIST

DEAR DENTIST: I'll take 20 lashes with 50,000 yards of dental floss! It wasn't my intention to minimize the advantage of "real" teeth. I only sought to comfort those who had lost theirs.

DEAR ABBY: I've read about so many divorced women whose husbands have married younger gals while Mother stayed single and raised the children.

The saddest part is when the children marry, and the "new wife" attends the wedding with Father, and poor old Mother has to attend the wedding alone.

Having been in exactly the same spot a few years ago, here's what I did. I Hired myself a tall, handsome, young escort from an escort service!

He was a part-time actor, and was very convincing in his role as a charming, interested gentleman.

Believe me, I never got more for my money in my life!

'Watch Blood Pressure'

By GAY PAULEY
NEW YORK (UPI) — Cool it! The slang term could be one of your best protections against the treatment for an ailment that affects an estimated 20 million to 25 million adults in the United States.

The ailment can become a killer too, especially in the setting it provides for atherosclerosis, a kind of hardening of the arteries that leads to coronaries. In all its ways, it's an element in the death of as many as 750,000 Americans a year.

The medical term for it is hypertension. Or, call it high blood pressure. Its causes could be many — and yet doctors really haven't zeroed in on conclusive answers.

Its treatments also are many but there is no real "cure" for it, although therapy including a whole arsenal of drugs can keep hypertension in check.

These points on hypertension are among those made in "Watch Your Blood Pressure," a new publication of the nonprofit educational Public Affairs Committee, headquartered in New York.

Author is Theodore Irwin, who has written extensively on health and social problems.

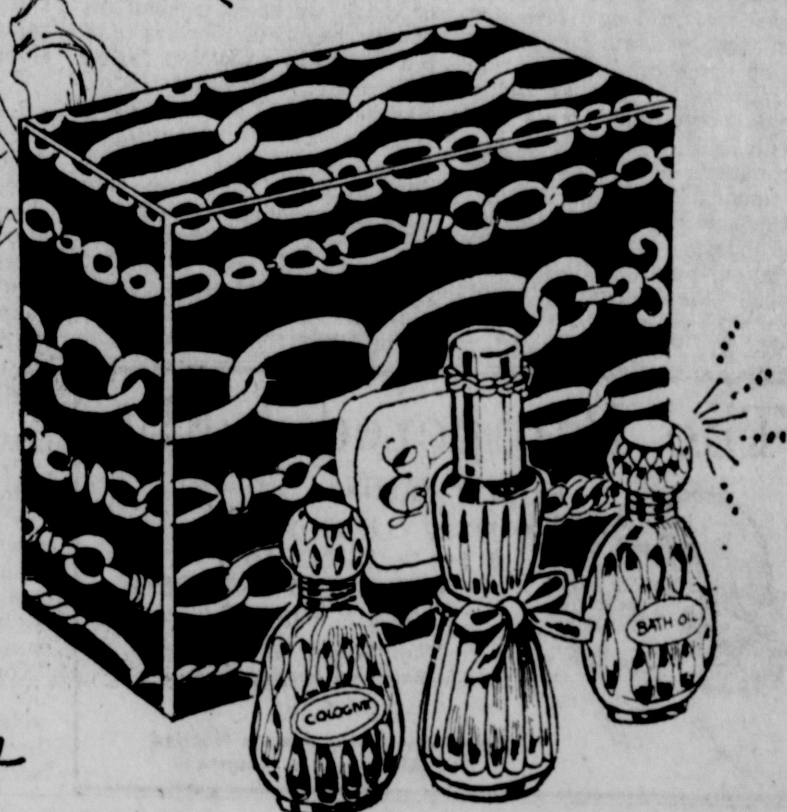

One strong point Irwin makes in his review of knowledge to date is: "Have you been overly tense, perhaps worrying too much? You can do much to ease nervous tension by reviewing the way you've been living and applying moderation whenever and wherever possible..."

"Get members of your family to cooperate by explaining what you have learned about the factors that could adversely affect your blood pressure. Your spouse and children should not create explosive situations that bring on emotional storms..."

Irwin also recommends: Cooperate all the way with your doctor. Take your medication faithfully and stick with the special diet. It'll probably be low in fat and salt.

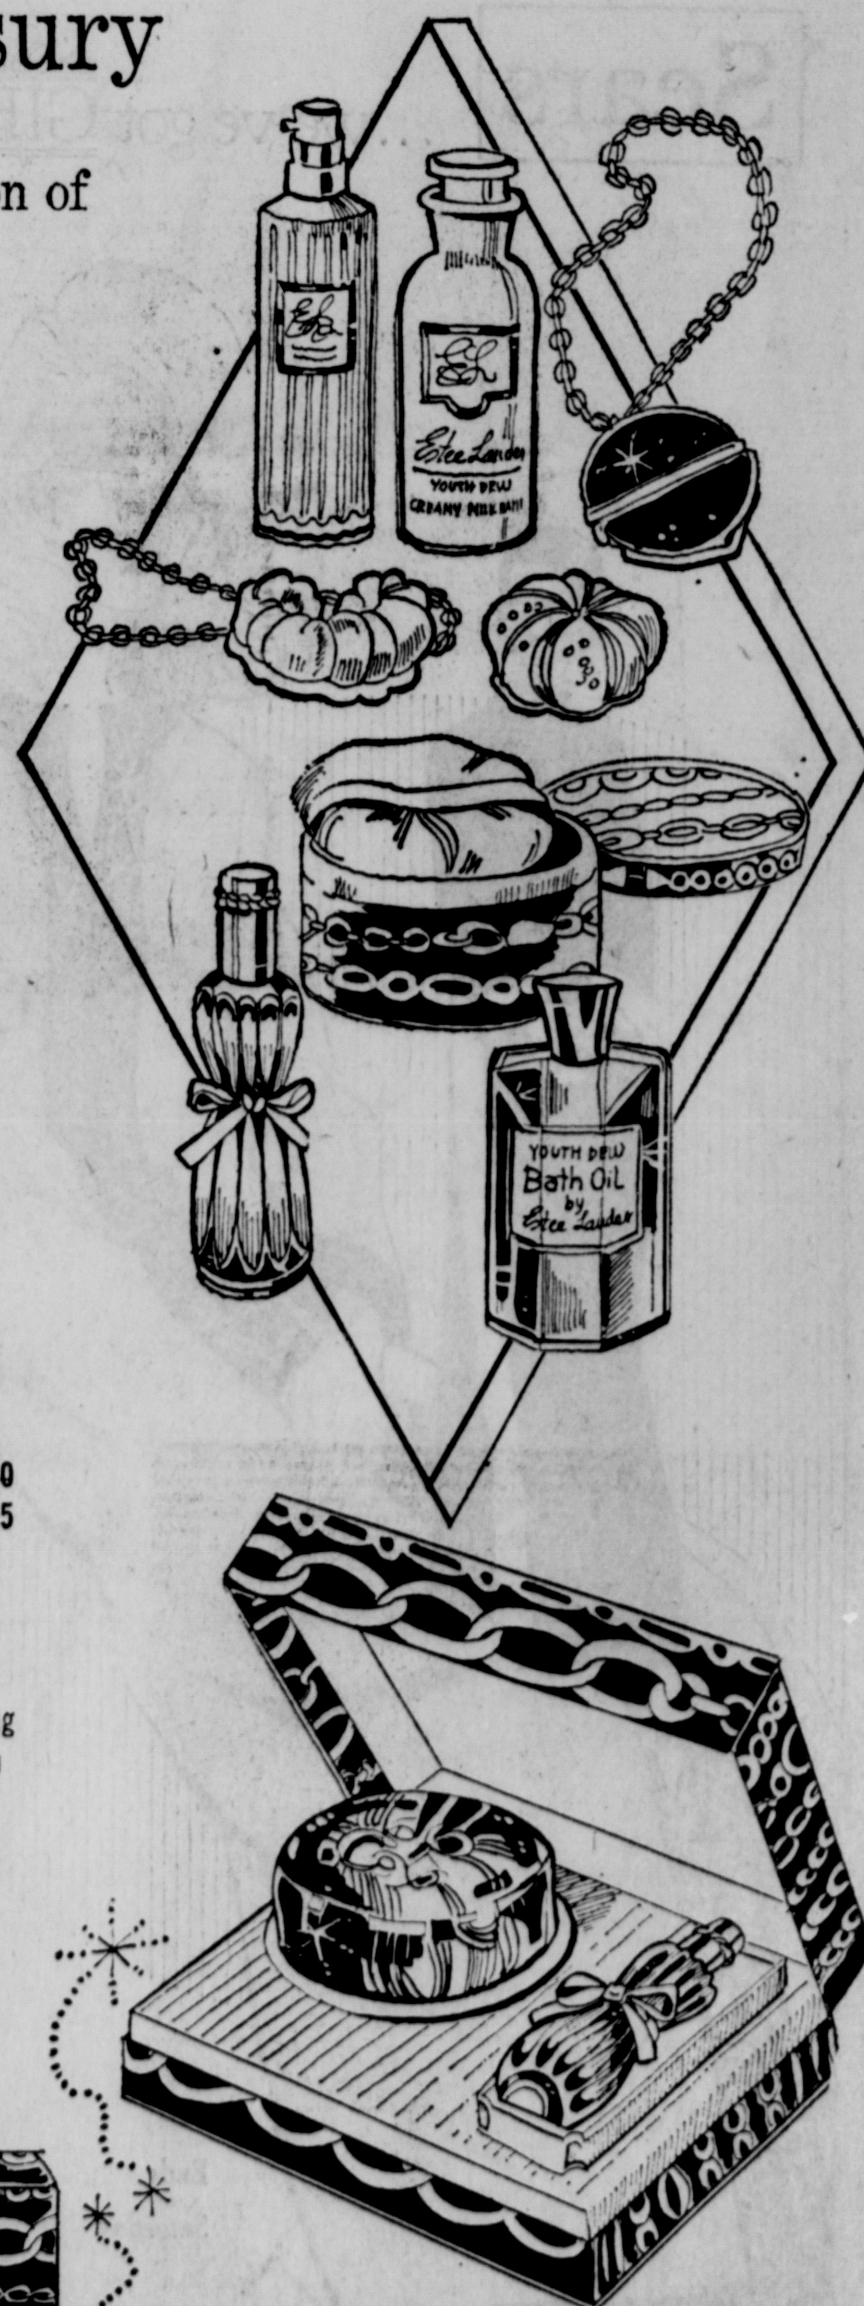

Cut out cigarette smoking. Irwin writes that smoking constricts blood vessels which boosts blood pressure. Drinking? While some persons react negatively to alcohol, he says a moderate amount may release nervous tension and help lower blood pressure.

Don't try quick remedies, the writer advises. Once you have chosen a qualified doctor, rely on him.

After A Fashion

Mori, Japan's Famous Fashion Designer

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — Japan's most famous fashion designer, Hanae Mori, was driving to her downtown offices in Tokyo recently. Somewhere along the line she caught a red light. The too-crowded bus — which pulled up a few inches beside her temporarily stalled car — was oversteered by commuters squished sardine-style into the vehicle.

During the brief stop Hanae glanced up at the bus.

To her horror she saw a man's face caught between the closed sliding doors and, although traveling in discomfort if not in pain, the commuter bore it.

"City living has become insufferable," says the impressionable designer about the indelible memory of a typical day which justifies her life. "In Tokyo men are employed by train companies to be 'pushers.' Their job literally is to push as many people onto the train as possible. Human beings are becoming a manipulatory commodity."

The loss of individuality on any basis — public transportation included — rubs against the very grain of Hanae's clothes-oriented existence. Fashion is, after all, a means of self-enhancement — a way of maintaining one's distinctiveness.

"Oh," she says, "how I hate to see these things lost in the business of living."

Sensitive Hanae, an innately gentle Oriental, decided to get away from it all and spend a leisurely and spiritually-recuperative weekend in Hanae — a posh Tokyo suburb where peace and beauty prevail. There's not a bus in sight. Mt. Fuji is outlined in the distance and the creature-comfort hotels in the immediate horizon feature impeccably manicured flower gardens where masses of cherry blossoms, chrysanthemums and gardenias bloom abundantly.

That particular day Hanae, a gifted artist, did a series of quick water-color sketches of the beautiful flowers and butterflies which flitted sensuously through them. Fashionables who know Hanae's instantly identifiable clothes know that often she translates her canvases onto chiffon evening gowns for which she is renowned.

Hanae's flower paintings, done as a kind of escape from reality, are the basis of her spring-summer, 1973, chiffon collection which is mostly caftans. But the mood is more Far East than Near East. Hanae's caftans have obi sashes, frog closings and kimono-like slits.

"Exotic fashion — like exposure to nature at its best — is a kind of necessary illusion," she says. "It's a way to forget the horrendous pressures of daily existence with bright colors, happy prints and sensuous fabrics."

Forty American stores now feature Hanae Mori fashions with a dozen more doing their best to snag the gowns for designer salons. Harrod's in London is doing such a bang-up business with them that certain competitive Paris and Rome stores are negotiating similar deals. "The fashion world has become very cosmopolitan in its attitude," she says. "Everyone can relate to looks once considered 'foreign.'"

It's true. Lady Bird Johnson, who usually wears gowns by American designer Mollie Parnis, recently went on a shopping spree at Neiman-Marcus and reportedly bought three Hanae Mori flower-printed gowns. When Mrs. Johnson was in the White House she avoided prints because they photographed badly. Now she's giving vent to her own beautification program.

Princess Pahlavi, glamorous sister of the Shah of Iran, has been buying Hanae Mori gowns by mail for years. The designer sends sketches and swatches to Her Royal Highness by mail. The order comes back the same way. "Now the Princess has wired she wants to see the whole collection on live models in the Iranian palace," says harried Hanae who's trying to sandwich a trip there between engagements.

When Mrs. Ronald Reagan was staying at Tokyo's Hotel Okura, she invited Hanae to bring the collection and live mannequins to her spacious suite. Within 10 minutes the wife of California's governor bought a ball gown and a cocktail dress-coat costume. "I was so delighted that she could fit into a model size 8," says Hanae, who can make the stout look skinny. "Most wives of important men require size 14."

The best-dressed wife of the Philippines president, Mrs. Ferdinand Marcos — a recent Town & Country cover girl — also summoned Hanae and entourage to her hotel in Tokyo. Mrs. Marcos, who usually wears Dior-Paris clothes, told Hanae what she wanted most was to look "different."

"But she herself is the most different sort of beauty you can image," says the designer. "When she came to greet me she was wearing a white lace wrap gown. I looked at her very long neck and her pure-white silhouette and thought to myself — goodness, she looks like a royal swan."

Practically all the flowers Hanae uses on her chiffon gowns are well-known Japanese symbols for love. When a man wants to whisper sweet nothings, he says nothing. He sends flowers which say it all — especially the camellia, the chrysanthemum and the gardenia which are Oriental expressions of man-woman affection. She would never use the Japanese symbol for "love" — a series of wonderful flourishes which are pure design — as a print for daytime dresses or, better, as a small hemline signature on her caftans. It isn't subtle enough.

The Japanese believe that nothing — clothes, gestures and even the spoken or written word — should reveal too much. "Things that are too evident are embarrassing," says Hanae. "They rob people of their mystique."

You can see why Hanae still shudders about the sight of her unfortunate countryman squashed into that train.

Family Finances

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

My husband and I are both 58 and have been married for 19 years. (I'm his third wife and we both have grown children from previous marriages.) For the first 12 years, we were very happy; then things seemed to be happening. My husband got to the point where he demanded everything of me, but said he wouldn't be responsible in return.

He wouldn't pay my doctor bills for a while, although he's paying them now. Then about four years ago, he said he wouldn't bury me if I died. He said the county would have to do that. Also he keeps a checking account in his name only. I can't touch it and it isn't a small account. He's been saying for the last year that it's his only, that none of that account is mine. I had a job until the last year and a half, and when I was working, my money went into that checking account too. At the time, I tried to pass off the idea that my name wasn't on it, but I think about it sometimes now. Am I being a sucker? Don't tell me to see a lawyer because I haven't any money of my own and my husband would never pay the bill. Except for two cars, we don't own a home or anything. But we don't have any debts either. Maybe all I need is advice on how to cope with my marriage.

Dear E.L.:

You might have done better if you'd tackled the problems of handling the family finances earlier in your marriage. Many women who work either insist on a joint account, or perhaps have a bank account in their own name. (It gives them a sense of independence.) But that's water under the bridge. Perhaps you'd do best by not discussing and arguing about such matters with your husband. He is legally and financially responsible for you, regardless of what he says.

Have you a problem as a mature woman, or with one? For advice write Margaret Brookfield, Information Center on the Mature Woman, 3 West 57th Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Doing the Right Thing

Dear Mrs. Post:

We are three girls writing about our bus driver's problem. Jerry's married and has a married son. The son and daughter-in-law are coming to visit soon and Jerry wants to know how to seat them when they go to church. We hope you can help.

Monica

Dear Monica:

Jerry should see that his daughter-in-law enters the pew first followed by her husband. Jerry should step in last. When they leave, he should step aside and wait for her to lead the way down the aisle.

Dear Mrs. Post:

Should the parents of the groom expect thank you notes after bridal showers and for a wedding gift, the same as everyone else, or is there a more etiquette way?

Mrs. Hinkley
Dear Mrs. Hinkley:
If the bride has thanked the groom's parents warmly at the shower, and when the wedding gift was presented, she need not write a note. In fact, it is never necessary to write a thank-you letter when thanks have been delivered in person.

Dear Mrs. Post:

Where does one place an iced tea spoon after use during a meal in a cafeteria. Cafeterias do not use coasters, but may use table cloths. This problem has bugged me for forty years. I first asked the question in high school at a round table meeting of forty girls. No one had a completely satisfactory answer.

Mrs. L.D.

Dear Mrs. D.:

In case some of the other thirty-nine are still wondering, perhaps you can show them this column.

When there is no saucer under an iced tea glass, the spoon should be set down, upside down, with the tip resting on the edge of the dinner, salad, or dessert plate, or a butter plate if there is one. This prevents drips or little pools of liquid forming on the table or staining the table cloth.

Dear Mrs. Post:
When an engagement is broken, does the girl have to give the ring back to the boy?
Dolores

Dear Dolores:

Yes.

HERE ARE SOME IDEAS

As a general rule, don't let a chair stand by itself in a corner. It can look forlorn that way. You can dress up a corner if you add perhaps a small table and lamp by the chair, or at least a picture or some other decoration in that corner.

One of the most useful pieces of furniture that's missing from many homes is a tea wagon. It can serve so many purposes for not only serving, but also for a nice place to keep things.

Should you buy a carpet with or without a pattern? One rule to keep in mind is that the absence of a pattern on a carpet will give a feeling of more spaciousness in the room; on the other hand, a pattern will help relieve the monotony of space and pep up a room that's too bland.

Here's a little trick that can add sparkle and variety to your home. Change your accessories with the seasons. Use some different accessories around the house in the fall and winter than you did in the spring and summer.

If you'd like to see lots of furniture ideas, you're welcome to come in and browse here—with no pressure and no obligation. And if you have a particular furnishing problem, we'll be happy to discuss it with you. We're at your service.

Photos Move Mountains

Chances are, if you've taken part in the battle for a cleaner environment, you (or your ecology group) have found yourself feeling mighty small and powerless more than once. You may well have "right on your side" when you work for cleaner air, purer water and other environmental benefits... but the "opposition" all too often has an unbeatable combination of money, lawyers and political clout in its corner.

What you need is an equalizer... something that will level the odds and give you at least a fighting chance against the "big boys" who sometimes seem to have such a vested interest in pollution.

Well, luckily for you, that equalizer is available. As a matter of fact, you can hold it — one of the world's most powerful weapons in the battle for a better environment — right in the palm of your hand. Used effectively, this tool can turn you into a modern Jack-the-giant-killer the next time you lock horns with your favorite polluter.

And what is this magic instrument? Nothing more than a simple, ordinary... camera. A picture is worth a thousand words, you know, and we only have to study recent history to realize how fantastically effective protest photography can be.

Remember those stark pictures that Lewis Hine used in the crusade against child labor back in the early 1900s? The photos aroused a great number of citizens who, in turn, pressured federal and state governments into passing legislation against that abuse.

More recently — in the 1950s and '60s — Charles Moore documented on film the bitter conflicts that resulted when blacks first entered some formerly all-white schools. Moore's photographs were widely circulated and were a prime factor in the U.S. Congress' decision to write sweeping school integration laws for this country.

And so it goes. Decade after decade, the camera continues to be a mighty tool for social change. Just two years ago, to cite one recent example, Ernest Lowe's pictorial exhibit of the problems faced by migrant workers inspired a whole new groundswell of interest in the plight of such individuals.

Photography was first used specifically to save the environment at least as early as the turn of the century, when a fellow named Andrew Putnam Hill decided that — single-handedly — he'd dramatize the wild beauty of California's Big Basin area.

Andrew built a darkroom in — of all places — a burned-out tree and set out to capture Big Basin's still unspoiled loveliness on film. The pictures that Hill developed in that hallowed-out stump caught the spirit of the wilderness area all right... and caught it so well that Hill's photos soon inspired the California legislature to declare Big Basin a state park.

Currently, one of the more active camera crusaders in the ecology struggle is William Bronson. His "How To Kill a Golden State" is a book of 300 photographs that show, in the author's words, "man's infinite capacity to befool and destroy in quest for an ever-higher standard of living." Bronson's work certainly illustrates just that and his pictures have already been used time and time again to recruit new people into the environmental movement.

Of course, we mustn't forget the Grand Master of conservation photography, Ansel Adams. Anyone who has ever seen one of Adams' sweeping landscapes in LIFE or Countess Sierra Club publications, will know — once and for all — what an ecological statement the camera in the hands of an those wrecks and then kind of made a point of distributing artist like Adams, is capable of making.

Then again, you certainly do not have to be a photographer of Ansel Adams' caliber to strike a meaningful blow for the planet with lens and film. David Hoff, for instance, is a 17-year-old student from Fair Oaks, Calif., and — unless I miss my guess — it's a reasonably safe bet that you've never heard of David Hoff in your life. On the other hand, the odds are just as good that you can learn something from David about making community environmental action waves with a camera.

David Hoff, you see, became just a little exasperated last year when his town's Chamber of Commerce let people dump junk cars on a plot of ground that had been set aside for a city park. He decided to do something about it.

Now, can one 17-year-old kid influence a town's Chamber of Commerce? You darn well better believe it... if that kid is armed with a camera. In this case, Dave took several good pictures of large prints of the photos to the Chamber of Commerce officials at their next meeting. You can guess the rest.

You can be just as effective as Andrew or William or Ansel or David when it comes to throwing photography into the conservation tussle. You won't even need expensive equipment or a fancy darkroom. The very simplest box camera and corner drugstore processing will do the job... as will the most basic shutter-snapping skills.

Photography may once have been a deep, dark, complicated process that only other people mastered. No more. Today's cameras and film have almost all the work taken out of them and — if you flat out need it — an introduction to the aim-focus-squeeze arts is as near as a $1.95 book. The manual, called "Photography Made Simple," was written by Don Langer and published by Doubday. Look for it in your local library or pick up a copy at any good book or photo store. Langer's guide covers the basics of setting up, posing and taking quality pictures... and that's all you need to know to start a photo crusade to save your community's environment.

Then, for a wealth of ideas on just where, why and how to begin that crusade, you might want to invest an additional dollar in Kodak's hard-hitting handbook, "Improve Your Environment, Fight Pollution With Pictures." The 56-page manual tells exactly how to record local eyesores and health hazards on film and what to do with the resulting photographs to make sure that a lot of people see them.

Think about it. What would happen if you managed to feature your area's biggest polluters in full, living sewage and belching smokestack detail on the front page of the local newspaper... or you set up a similar display of large prints that traveled from one shopping center to another in your town?

As Ansel Adams has said, "The environment is only as safe as people — knowing about what is happening — want it to be." With photographs, you can help make sure that folks do know what is happening.

For a free leaflet that contains additional thoughts on fighting pollution with a camera, send a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope and 10 cents to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS in care of Register and Tribune Syndicate Inc., 715 Locust Street, Des Moines, Iowa, 50304. A Weekly Information Service for Consumers.

By Margaret Dana

If you expect to give some youngster a toy for Christmas, you should follow the rule of never selecting a toy simply on the basis of what the child himself says he wants. Nor, should you buy one without first looking it over carefully, feeling it (especially along edges) and, if it happens to be electric, checking that it has been tested for safety.

A newer point for checking is one not many of us are aware of. This is the noise factor. Among the more than 1,000 toys the Bureau of Product Safety has banned up to this fall, a surprising number have been ordered removed or altered because of the noise they make. It has been found that all too often this loud noise-making factor seriously damages a child's hearing.

The Child Protection and Toy Safety Act of 1969 authorized the Bureau of Product Safety of the Food and Drug Administration to remove and keep from the market toys and other children's products with electrical, mechanical or thermal hazards.

The noise hazard is very real, and it is important for adults to be the front line of protection here. Simply don't buy any toy for any age child which makes a loud, harsh or sharp noise. Some may be below the danger level. Others be far above it. But don't take chances.

The Bureau of Product Safety offers monthly lists of all banned toys. District Offices of the FDA will have these on hand for you to study and many public libraries also keep the list on hand for reference.

The FDA District Offices are in: Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Dallas, Brooklyn, N.Y., Minneapolis, Detroit, Denver, Newark, N.J., Kansas City, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Philadelphia, San Francisco, San Juan-Puerto Rico, and Seattle.

At any of these district offices you can also get information about the program initiated by the Bureau of Product Safety to train volunteers to check the stores for banned toys and for those which may need to be banned.

In checking over the current list of banned toys I note that a large number of them were removed because of sharp edges, or small parts that come loose and could be swallowed, or loose straight pins used to hold parts of a toy.

These are all things that any responsible grown person could check for himself. And even with the help the Bureau has provided in getting so many toys off the market, new ones come along from time to time. The consumer buyer can help control this curious danger for children by taking time and care when buying any toy.

One other thing to watch out for in buying toys is the deceptive packaging. Often the use of an over-size container suggests a much bigger game, toy or gift than is the actual case. The Federal Trade Commission has warned six toy manufacturers that their packaging is deceptive in this way, and that the FTC intends to issue complaints against them.

What our stores should do is to have one opened sample package of any sealed toy package, so buyers could see for themselves what's inside. You might suggest this to your local toy stores.

If you're planning to give a child a minibike for Christmas, think twice. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration warns that these become a high risk vehicle on sidewalks and roadways. The Administration opposes all use of minibikes on sidewalks or streets, but it cannot make this a federal law. This is up to state regulation and enforcement. Even better, it should be a matter of parental regulation and enforcement — for the child's own safety.

If you do buy a minibike for a child, resolve you will enforce these three rules: riding on sidewalks or streets is prohibited; helmets should be mandatory equipment at all times; sturdy clothing and shoes should be worn to reduce injuries from falling.

One more note about choosing gifts for children: The best and longest-lasting gifts, which provide more real fun and recreation, are the gifts which challenge a youngster to be creative — through his imagination or his skillful fingers. And those need not be expensive. Collect a small chest of "dress-up" clothes for make-believe, like a theater "prop-box," and give it to a child or a family of children to use in dressing up for fun. Old clothes, funny old hats, great big gloves, false mustaches — all these can be fun for years.

Gifts that have no challenge — which are only to look at — are soon a bore, and a temptation merely to break them up. Try using your own imagination to find gifts that help children grow in mind and spirit.

Consumer Question-Box

Q. I bought some cheese marked "made with part skim milk." I wrote to the company asking if they would tell me what part skim milk was used and also the calories it contained. Their reply was "We are very sorry but we do not carry the information you requested in our files." Shouldn't they have this info?

A. Yes, they should, but small companies would not be in a position probably to analyze and label their products in this manner, nor would they have the information available. The particular label to which you refer meant that the cheese was partly made of skim milk — or that of its total milk ingredients, partly skimmed milk (meaning part of the butter-fat had been removed) was used. Because of an increasing demand from consumers for specific information about calories in foods, and amounts of fat, there is now much discussion going on as to how best to find out and correctly label foods for these factors. It is on its way.

Q. I have been told it is dangerous to use Teflon-coated pans that have been scratched, especially so in cases where the finish is partially worn off. Is this so? Or is this rumor being promoted by the manufacturers so that the consumer will replace cooking utensils sooner than necessary?

A. The rumor often crops up that if Teflon is scratched, or particles get in food, it becomes a hazard. I have checked many research reports from different sources, independent of the Teflon company, and find they all agree that Teflon scratches offer no danger and that worn Teflon surfaces are no problem except that food is more likely to stick to places where the Teflon is gone.

No, manufacturers are not trying to sell more pots and pans by scaring consumers about worn-out Teflon.

ABOUT ANTIQUES

How easy it is to find oneself chuckling over a quaintly extravagant object of a bygone era that actually fulfilled a quite important function in its time. The hat pin holder is a good example.

Today's antique browser might pass such a holder by with a quick glance as being a large salt or sugar shaker, unless it happens to be in a dresser set. A closer look will reveal that its numerous top openings are too large, however, and it has no opening for filling. But it's easy to see how handily it would hold a hat pin collection with all the different colors and shapes of heads in plain view for easy selection.

Hat pin holders may be found in the finest of porcelains, in many types of glassware, silver, and various other materials. The one pictured is of hand-painted Nippon ware, about six inches high, nearly three inches wide at the bottom and two inches wide at the top.

Surrounding a one-half-inch opening in the center (what a pin that must have held!) there are 10 smaller holes. It's decorated with red and yellow roses, green leaves and birds on a creamy yellow and white background, with gold banding circling the top and all openings.

An antique hat pin holder will be an obvious must for a collector of old hat pins, but it could add a delightful note of bygone interest to any collection.

Prices are usually moderate, unless a rarity is encountered — such as a model that was made of pastel carnival glass, which is often collected in its own right.

Mothers will see a new label when they go shopping for their children's clothes for winter. That label reads: Flammable. Under terms of a new standard enacted by the Department of Commerce, children's sleepwear in sizes up to 6X manufactured after July 29, 1972, must pass a rigid test for flame-resistance or carry the cautionary label. But sleepwear, fiber and fabric producers haven't been caught unaware and today there are available a wide range of fabrics and new methods of garment construction that insure youngsters safer sleep. Warm cuddly blanket sleepers from Nazareth Mills and Robbie (left) possess superior flame-retardant characteristics. Trundle Bundle (right) is also flame-resistant. The fabric in all is SEF modacrylic.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I had had a busy public life, but after I retired I felt so useless.

I love to read and many of my friends gave me the better paperbacks. I accumulated about 200 books and began lending them to the senior citizens and invalids. (No charge of course.)

I again feel that I am doing some good in the world and giving pleasure to other people.

Ruth Woodworth
Bless you, Ruth. I'm sure there must be thousands of books around wanting to be read by people who do not always have access to them. Let's all get those books to the people who need them!

Dear Heloise:
I enclose my favorite recipe for "A well-ordered household":

2 lbs. self-control
1 lb. consideration
5 lbs. patience
1 lb. discipline
Sweeten generously with charity. Let simmer well. Have the lady of the house take large doses daily.

I have five young sons and some days, I confess, I forget to take a dose or two.

I thought you might enjoy this and share it with your "millyuns" of fans.

I read your column every morning and I also do crossword puzzles frequently.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER
Dear Heloise:

About the gals who cool their coffee with coffee ice cubes. So sad that they haven't heard of the greatest invention since the wheel: it's called the saucer. (I prefer a shallow cereal bowl myself.)

They go to a lot of trouble emptying out ice cubes and pouring leftover coffee into trays. It is still leftover coffee any way you cube it!

Don't they know that "coffee ain't coffee if it ain't sauced and cooled"?

And, one of these days, when it becomes the thing to do, I'll be very smug about having been doing it all along.

TEEN SCENE: Super Fly and the Super Curtis Mayfield

By LEI

One of the most successful films this year exploiting the black and teenage markets is "Super-Fly," a very super-cool, super-moving, super-hip little film which, while shot on a budget consisting of shoestrings and peanuts is going to make several people super-stars. There's even talk of an Oscar or two coming out of it, and if they give Oscars for rather self-conscious hipness, it ought to cop all of them. Otherwise, it'd be competing against "The Godfather," and let's face it, a massacre isn't competition.

Within its limitations, "Super-Fly," the jivey film about a black cocaine pusher is an exceptionally good film of its type. The men who made it had top credentials in their fields, and not surprisingly, they didn't shoot another "Blackula" or "Teen-Age Jungle." Among the other entertainers who are very glad that they had a part in "Super-Fly" is Curtis Mayfield. He's the fellow on the soundtrack. He's also the fellow off the soundtrack. The title song from the movie rearranged the charts for weeks, and now "Fred Is Dead," also from the same film, is doing it all over again.

What makes this especially important is that Curtis Mayfield is not just a hip black voice chosen to sing a hip black song in a hip black movie (Did we say "hip" or "hype?") Curtis Mayfield wrote the score for "Super-Fly" including "Fred Is Dead." Hollywood has come a long way, baby, since the days of Mancini and Percy Faith. Black then, the nearest a black musician could have gotten to the soundtrack of a film was Harry Belafonte singing calypso, during a scene set in the West Indies.

What's more important than the fact that a young black composer has been called by Billboard Magazine "a strong contender for an Academy Award," is the fact that Curtis Mayfield isn't satisfied. Obviously, the film—and the soundtrack are successful. The "Super-Fly" LP has been at the top of the charts for nearly four months, and "Fred Is Dead" is doing as well on the singles charts. The film is in the black, (no pun intended) and a lot of people stand to make a lot of money on it—which after all was the whole idea. But success, measured in terms of awards on the shelf and money in the bank aren't everything to Curtis Mayfield. He's unhappy about many aspects of his association with "Super-Fly."

The film, of course, does tend to glamorize the big-city coke peddler, no matter how much of a bum his life is portrayed as being. As such, of course, it also tends to glamorize the drug culture. Unfortunately—and unfairly—Curtis Mayfield has found himself under attack because his sound track "condones drug use." It must be a case of guilt by association, because nobody listening to the morose lyrics of "Fred Is Dead" could construe it as anything as a warning against drugs.

Curtis is also miffed that it took "Super-Fly" to put him in the eye of the public at large, although music lovers have been familiar with him for years. He isn't just a singer, or a composer, but also is involved with production, publishing, and management. "Super-Fly" is on his Curtom label, and he manages such talent as the Impressions and Ruby Jones. There is a booking agency connected with the Mayfield organization, which also arranges tours. Curtis Mayfield is doing all he can to expose black musical talent to the American public.

After his involvement with "Super-Fly," Curtis wasn't at all sure that the film wasn't a negative influence, building up the image of the cool black hustler, while ignoring the fact that there is a much more constructive side to life in black America—even the ghetto life.

And that is why Curtis Mayfield has turned down the chance to do the score for the sequel to "Super-Fly." Today, Curtis is winding up a month-long tour with a concert in Buffalo, N. Y. He has taped a segment for the Flip Wilson Show, and you can't miss him on the television—his quiet, unemotional, self-confident musical delivery are making him a favorite television performer—a professional in a day when excess is often confused with art.

Just after the first of the year, Curtis Mayfield will apply his talents in a new direction. He will be writing the score—And the script—for a film, which, he hopes, will accent the positive side of humanity in the black ghetto. Obviously, he feels that fame and success can mean nothing to a performer who has to sell his artistic integrity to obtain them.

How about "Super-Guy?"

Youth in the News---Campus Activities

Rondout Valley in Midst of Music

It is the musical season at Rondout Valley Central Schools this month.

The instrumentalists presented their winter concert this past week and the choir is in the midst of its singing season.

Recently eleven students attended Area All-State at Hudson. This past weekend Diane Eldridge, Joe Ellsworth, and Craig Eldridge spent five days in Rochester as members of the 1972 All-State Choir.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 13, the RVHS Choral will compete in the Mid-Hudson Area Choral Festival at Newburgh High School. The Choral Competition is sponsored by the McDonald Famous Restaurants and the Newburgh Jaycees.

Participating schools will be Marlboro, John Jay High School,

Newburgh Free Academy Boys' Glee Club and Mixed Choir, Warwick Central, Mount St. Mary's Academy, Monroe-Woodbury Central, Middletown High School, Cornwall Central High, Minisink Valley High, Pine Bush High, and Rondout Valley.

On Saturday, Dec. 16, those chosen in the Wednesday competition will compete in the finals.

The Holiday Choral Concert at Rondout Valley will be held Sunday, Dec. 17, at 3 p.m. in the high school auditorium. The Choral and the High School Choir will be featured. Special selections will be given by the Barbershoppers and the Adelines.

Music isn't the only busy activity at Rondout Valley. The Middle Schoolers have been involved in election of Student Council representatives.

In true political tradition, primaries were held in which candidates from each classroom made campaign speeches. Later a convention was held during which the candidates' names were put into nomination and seconded. Students supporting each candidate were permitted to hold brief demonstrations with posters and music.

Election results in the fifth grade saw the following students win seats on Student Council: Michael Christiana, Robin Ghear, Mary Katherine Mulligan, Scott Herion, Mark Pastir, James Martin, Gene Temple, Charles Lewis, and Darren Natale. The alternates are David Van Orden, Ray Zorn, Jodie Ritter, Natalie Arkimovich, Eleanor Blumm, Belinda Van Leuven, Charlotte Hall-Davis, Carl Steinhoffer, and Tom Warg.

Successful Council candidates from the sixth grade were: Chris Tefft, Kenneth Ramcke, Russell Stewart, Lisa Fallis, Ellen Mulligan, Linda Swart, Natina Gale, Laura Keene, and Douglas Horton. Sixth grade alternates are Warren Currey, Jean Doria, Debra Groudy, Harry Previll, Kevin Hagen, Peter Davis, Stephanie Carter, Danny McCluskey, and Tim Pagliarioni.

Holiday Gift With a Future

As the labor market changes, the information needed by people — old and young — in making proper career decisions becomes critical. In noting this, Herbert Bienstock, Regional Director of the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics suggested two highly useful publications which could make unique and practical gifts for the holidays.

The 1972-73 edition of the Occupational Outlook Handbook describes more than 700 jobs and 30 major industries. Information on the nature of work in each job, the educational and training requirements, earnings and working conditions, the employment outlook, and other job factors is compiled to present an accurate and comprehensive view of career opportunities in the United States. The Handbook sells for $6.25 and is written in a manner that will appeal to youngsters from the late elementary school years through college, while, at the same time providing adult users with useful job-market information.

Freeman TEEN Page KHS Creates 'Robot' Film

A slide-tape project, "Rapping With A Robot," created by two Kingston High School students was featured at the National Council for the Social Studies annual conference in Boston recently.

Alexander Yosman and George Moxham, presently seniors, developed this slide-tape program two years ago in their tenth grade social studies class.

The sixteen-minute recording accompanying the slides was updated and re-recorded this fall by John Alecca and Allan Souers, also seniors.

"Rapping With A Robot" describes the double-edged nature of automation in our modern society using the format of an interview between a scientist and a robot. The script casts the robot as a statistician, a poet, a musician, a writer of jokes, a sociologist as well as a "machine." Appropriate sound effects and well selected drawings, photographs and cartoons enhance the project.

The project is unique in that it was completely created and carried to completion by students. Their teacher, Mrs. Viola W. Opdahl, only provided the motivation, the opportunity and availability of technical equipment. Joseph Happeny, English Arts teacher, cooperated in the re-recording of the tape this fall.

Personnel from the Bureau of Social Studies in the State Education Department are inquiring about the possibility of also presenting it at the annual meeting of the State Council for the Social Studies next March.

The Student Production Crew that worked on bringing the slide-tape project to completion included Victoria Johnson, Phyllis Arcadipane, Lucida Notari, Timothy Bartley, Jeffrey Dunham, Patricia Loeffler and Michelle Curtin.

An earlier slide-tape project, "Two Hundred Years of Intellectual Change," written and produced by three tenth grade social studies classes, was featured in a magazine article written by Mrs. Viola W. Opdahl and just published in the fall issue of the SOCIAL SCIENCE RECORD, the official magazine of the State Council for the Social Studies. This was a sequel to an earlier article on the same project published in 1971 and co-authored by Mrs. Opdahl and students, Richard Raloff, Lawrence Genereux and Gloria Levine.

Norway Resorts Ready 1973 Ski Tour Vacations

NEW YORK — Many American and Canadian skiers who are turning to "ski touring" in greatly increased numbers, will look to Norway for ski vacations in 1973. Several ski resorts in Norway cater particularly to those interested in ski touring. Most Norwegians prefer to start their ski tour right outside the hotel — instead of using a ski lift. And ski touring is certainly a family affair in Norway, where children are "born with skis on". Even toddlers come along, too, strapped safely inside a small "pulk", trailing behind mom or dad. ("Pulk" is a Lappish word, used to describe the peculiar type of sled which is pulled by a reindeer.)

Norway's most popular ski resorts are situated in the mountain ranges along the Bergen and Dovre railroads, where snow conditions are ideal, and the sunshine is really warm. Norway is certainly more solar than polar. A variety of tour packages that lay heavy stress on the thrill of Nordic ski touring is offered this season by not less than three airlines — Scandinavian Airlines, Pan American and Icelandic Airlines. They also make it so easy to get there, too.

Skiing instruction in Norway is a high standard and well organized. All leading winter sport resorts have ski schools — also for children — all instructors teach by the same methods. Skis and equipment can be hired or you may buy what you need in Oslo or Bergen. There is a great variety of ski slopes — for experts as well as for novices — and most are served by modern ski lifts. Norway's modern hotels provide fine accommodation, from top-grade resort hotels via inexpensive tourist lodges to cut-rate youth hostels.

Freeman Travel News Strawberry Banke's Best

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. — Before closing the 10-acre Strawberry Banke has just completed the most successful season of its eight year history. Twelve thousand school children participated in group tours this year. This was an additional 50 per cent over 1971. The South Meeting House, which is outside the project area, was available seven days a week to the Chamber Music Festival, the New Hampshire Art Association, the Seacoast Arts Council, Theatre-by-the-Sea and the New Hampshire Commission on the Arts. A new craft shop was established with the acquisition of the entire historic contents of the Hiram Lowell and Sons Boat Shop in Amesbury, Massachusetts. Although the Banke is closed to the public until May 1 of next year, the Boat Shop will continue building small craft throughout the winter months. The ensuing weeks will be spent in preparation for next season in anticipation of Portsmouth's 350th Anniversary. Strawberry Banke has also instituted a policy of adapting many of the homes as rental properties. The problems of funding will absorb staff and board energies in the immediate future.

Recently, Strawberry Banke entered a new kind of partnership with the community. A year ago a group of concerned citizens representing a cross-section of social agencies dedicated themselves to creating a "group living" home for young people. To this unusual, learning-oriented endeavor Strawberry Banke will lease one of its properties. It will be called Port House, and will contain house parents, a counselor and twelve to fourteen teenagers who might otherwise be placed in foster homes, incarcerated in the State Industrial School or perhaps completely neglected.

Visiting Washington...Some Tips

More and more Americans are visiting Washington, D. C., a third or fourth or even fifth time, and are learning that there's always something new to see and do in the Nation's Capital.

How does the repeat visitor amuse himself? Here's a rundown of the attractions usually overlooked by the first-time visitor:

National Collection of Fine Arts, G. Street between 7th and 8th streets, northwest; open 10:30-5:30 daily; 381-5180. This Smithsonian Museum specializes in American art and offers a splendid variety. There's the world's largest collection of Catlin and Ryder, a Children's Gallery and plenty of current exhibitions. The Patent Building, in which the museum is located, is also one of Washington's architectural showpieces.

Petersen House, 516 10th Street, northwest; open 9:30-5:30 daily except Christmas. William Petersen, a tailor from Sweden, built this house in 1849. He operated his business in the basement and rented extra rooms. On April 14, 1865, President Abraham Lincoln, attending a performance at Ford's Theatre, was shot by John Wilkes Booth. Lincoln was carried across the street to the Petersen house and in one of the house's small bedrooms, died at 7:22 a.m. April 15.

Bureau of Printing and Engraving, 14th and C Streets, southwest; WO 4-7611; open 8:30-5:30 weekdays only. All U.S. paper money is printed here and you can watch the process without paying a cent. The bureau also prints bonds, stamps and other financial instruments. There's no parking facilities so try to park on the Mall. No picture-taking is permitted.

Federal Bureau of Investigation, 9th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, northwest; EX 3-7100, ext. 447; open 9:15-4:15 weekdays only. The FBI's free group tour lasts an hour and attracts thousands of youngsters daily and plenty of adults, too. Lab techniques and machine gun firing are demonstrated.

Franciscan Monastery, 14th and Quincy Streets, northeast; LA 6-6800; open 8-4 daily. The catacombs and gardens are interesting to all tourists but Catholics will find special significance in visiting the monastery (a short distance from the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception). Guided tours begin regularly.

Library of Congress, 1st and Independence Avenue, southeast; 426-5000; open 8:30 a.m. - 9:30 p.m. Monday through Friday; 8:30-5 Saturday and 1-5 Sunday. The world's largest library is worthwhile even if you hate libraries. Gutenberg Bible, the original draft of the Declaration of Independence and Gettysburg Address are among the impressive displays. The building is also an architectural marvel.

Georgetown area; go west on M Street from downtown. Long before Washington, D. C., came into being, Georgetown, Maryland was a bustling little community. Today, it's part of Washington instead of Maryland, and it's the home of dozens of capital notables plus a delight of the shopper who's more intent on interesting merchandise than bargains. Row houses line its streets. Decatur house, H Street and Jackson Place, northwest, adjacent to Lafayette Square; open 10-4 daily; admission 50 cents (Children under 15 free). Commodore Stephen Decatur, hero of U.S. wars with the Barbary pirates, built this Georgian townhouse in 1818. Martin Van Buren and Henry Clay later lived there, too. The Truxton Naval Museum is adjacent. It's free, but closed Mondays.

Wilson House, 2340 S. Street, northwest; open 1-4 daily; admission 50 cents for adults, students and military 25 cents. Ex-president Woodrow Wilson lived here until he died and his widow lived there until 1961, when she died.

Frederick Douglass House, 1411 W. Streets, S. E.; 9-4 daily (426-6917). The long-time home of the famed 19th century abolitionist statesman is a completely restored museum. Among memorabilia is a cane once owned by Abraham Lincoln and presented by Mrs. Lincoln to Douglass.

National Arboretum, Bladensburg Road and R. St., N.E. (399-5400); 8-4:30 Monday through Friday, 10-5 weekends and holidays. More than 400 acres of pastoral green is interspersed with brilliant flowers and shrubs of countless varieties.

Here's the Answer to Home Problems

AP Newsfeatures

Q — I am planning on using plastic laminate on our kitchen counter tops and I have been shopping around for the material. Our local lumber yard has a number of different-size sheets on display. They are all made by the same manufacturer, but one sheet, 2 feet by 5 feet, costs more than any sheet of exactly the same size. The thickness appear to be the same. Why the difference in price? What kind of cement should I use?

A — Your eyes are deceiving you. One of the sheets probably is one-sixteenth of an inch thick, the other one-thirty second of an inch, a difference that may not be readily noticed but nevertheless means that one sheet is twice as thick as the other. For a counter top application, choose the thicker kind. The thin type is satisfactory for drawer fronts and other vertical applications. Use a contact cement for bonding the plastic laminate to the plywood, composition board or whatever is being used as the base. Since, as the name implies, this cement grips instantly upon contact, it is important that the plastic be positioned carefully over the base before the two parts are put together.

Q — I am constantly running across the terms thermoplastic and thermosetting when reading about plastic do-it-yourself projects. What's the difference between the two?

A — Thermoplastics are those which soften with the application of heat. Thermosetting plastics cannot be reshaped and are resistant to heat.

Q — There are so many things wrong with the brick chimney in our house that I would like to rebuild it. Can you tell me how to do it?

A — It is a difficult job calling for skill and knowledge. It should be done by a professional.

Q — Can you tell me what are the advantages of baseboard heating? We're having a heating change made in our home.

A — The big plus for baseboard heating is that uniform temperatures are maintained from wall to wall and floor to ceiling, thus eliminating hot spots, cold spots, chilly corners and drafty floors. It is especially good in homes with children, who can play on floors that aren't several degrees colder than the rest of the room.

Oaktree... 'Old World' Beauty

By JACK McEENEY
PROVIDENCE, R.I.

A paramount factor in the Cape Cod design is mostly simplicity which reflects the beauty of its "old world" appearance, and the room arrangement without waste, and above all, reduced construction cost. This quality is demonstrated in today's feature, called "The Oaktree."

Filled with comfort and friendly charm for the family that requires either two bedrooms, or, as many as four bedrooms, by simply finishing the second floor. "The Oaktree" design eliminates expensive gingerbread, such as roof gables or expensive roof overhangs. The foundation is rectangular with no breaks; the windows and doors are all inexpensive lumber yard stock items, and the roof pitch is reduced to a minimum to permit the inclusion of second that the two downstairs bedrooms are sufficient for the time being, the upstairs finish can be reserved for the future and in time completed by the owner at considerable construction savings.

The first floor plan is divided into the main living area on the left side, consisting of a big kitchen, family dining room and a very large living room with side bay window and a center wall fireplace. The two bedrooms with wardrobe space and full bath make up the right side.

The first floor contains 788 square feet, and the size of "The Oaktree" is 28 feet x 26 feet.

Your Horoscope - - Today and Monday

Sunday, December 10

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you listen to what friends have to suggest and also know your own aims, this happy combination will result in fine benefits. Show more regard for others and gain more in return. Take it easy in p.m.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Bigwigs and associates you confer with today do not seem to agree where ideas are concerned for your advancement, so listen to both then make own plans. Take no risks. Get to bed early so you get an early start in the morning.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You first have to finish chores facing you and then you can put through those fascinating ideas your mind is developing. Some new friend can help you get out of that convenient but dull rut you have fallen into.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Why worry about what cannot be helped? Get out with interesting and fascinating people and have wise talks about improving the future. One you admire has fine ideas. Try to listen carefully and put in action.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A family tie and an associate do not see eye to eye, so do not bring them together and all works out well. Others resent your forceful attitude, so tone it down and you benefit. Be your romantic self in p.m.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to follow more orthodox methods and principles instead of doing just the opposite and getting yourself into hot water. Attend the services of your choice. Join some good friend at favorite amusements later in the day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Why don't you forget practical matters now and get into amusements that will renew your vigor? You will be able to have new and creative ideas thereby, also. Stop getting so excited about something until you know all the facts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Forget all that arguing with kind and do something of a constructive nature that will help you get ahead faster. Don't forget to attend services, though. There is more power in prayer than you realize.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Stop worrying about something you can do nothing about and get busy with ideas you have for improving your lot in life. You have a clever friend who can show you how to become a happier person. Listen carefully.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Although financial affairs have you very worried, if you get together with progressive friends, they can give you good advice, ideas for improving your position. Become more interested in the social side of life. Be happier.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get into the personal aims you have and put off until tomorrow the business matters which could cause trouble right now. Avoid an influential person who is not in a good mood today. Enjoy your favorite hobby tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) There are fine ideas running through your mind so do something about them that is practical instead of being so unsure of yourself. You can expand along very orthodox lines. Listen to what mate has to suggest, also.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A Sunday to be sure you live the Golden Rule and establish harmony with those you are with instead of yielding to a planetary urge to argue and dispute. Engaging in wholesome studies as well as attending services lessens the likelihood of accidents or problems with others now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those delightful young people who must be taught early to correlate personal and financial aims, otherwise one or the other could suffer and the fine promise here would be lost. Give right spiritual training early so that the ideas become lofty and in tune with the giver of all that is good. Any profession entered into will then become successful.

Monday, December 11

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Keep busy with business matters and forget social activities since others are not in a good mood today. A new contact may be disappointing to you. Await a better day to get best results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your good reputation could be ruined if you are not careful today when others are in a strange mood. Be sure to pay an important bill and avoid arguments that could be expensive. Relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are tempted to make radical changes where your business outlets are concerned and this would lead to chaos instead of advancement. Solve problems wisely instead. Think constructively.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't try to pull a fast one in your eagerness to get out of debt, but do it sensibly. Find a new outlet for your capabilities. Keep a promise to mate and get the backing you need.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Carry through with contracts you have with associates and you find you are ahead of the game. Don't permit a civic matter to upset you. This could be a blessing in disguise so take it in stride.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Begin the new week properly by getting right at all the work facing you. Higher-ups are observing you, so do an excellent job. Get yourself in line for a raise instead of a roasting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take care you don't run off on an expensive tangent and neglect important work that needs to be done. Do something thoughtful for those around you and gain the cooperation you want and need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you are forceful with those who live with you, a terrible argument could result. A kind attitude instead is wise. Get rid of those fixed ideas and have more harmony in the home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You want to keep appointments today but it is important that you are in the right mood first. You could receive a letter that is upsetting, but it is an opportunity in disguise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Avoid extravagance in expenditures or you may regret it later. Get busy budgeting your money after talking with a financier. Then you will know what you should do in the near future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study what your true position is with others, both in business and social life, and know what is best to do in the future. Not a good day to contact friends. They are too preoccupied now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) It is wise to keep promises made to others instead of trying to squirm out of them. Attend to problematical affairs and, clear the slate for the future. Much progress can be made at this time.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Whatever benefits come today are not likely to be in accordance with plans already made. You would be wise to act in a conventional manner so that the possibility of upsets are minimized. Avoid those who act in a bombastic fashion.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those young persons who should train for trouble-shooting vocations, since there is much desire to be doing something exciting. Your progeny may want to stir up trouble just to prove the ability of straightening it out later. Give as much ethical and religious training as possible so that this life becomes a happy one. Teach sportsmanship early in life. Use the right psychology here.

Money Clips

By MORT REED

The U.S. General Services Administration has put on public sale more than two million valuable 19th-century Carson City Silver dollars.

According to A. F. Sampson, head of the GSA, this initial sale consists of coins minted in 1882, 1883 and 1884 at the Carson City mint which closed in 1893. The silver dollars will have a minimum bid price of $30 each and public bidding will end on Jan. 31, 1973.

For the most part uncirculated, the 90 per cent silver dollars are of the type illustrated above and each bears the mint mark "CC". It under the reverse wreath. At the higher the bid, of course, the better chances a bidder has of acquiring a coin.

All bids mailed in will be placed in a computer in San Francisco to ensure a fair sale and to list bids in a descending order so that top bidders will be more or less guaranteed a coin. Only one coin from each of the three years may be bid upon.

After winning bidders have been determined, each will receive a summary explaining which coin or coins were won by his offer. The price and refund due, if any, will also be enclosed and coins or refund checks will be mailed so they arrive between April 1 and June 1, 1973.

If there are more orders than coins, the silver dollars will be sold first to the highest bidders, then to succeeding lower bidders until the $30 base price is reached. Remaining orders will be filled on a random basis, again by computer, until the supply is exhausted. On the other hand, if there are more coins than orders, all bidders will receive coins at the minimum price and the excess bid will be refunded.

Incidentally, there is a second chance feature to this sale. It is for the individual with no real preference as to the year, date of the coin. He may specify on his order form that he will accept a substitute of the year on which his bid happens to be sold out.

Bidders must use their own judgment on bids. The GSA offers to help in that area.

Order forms are available at banks, saving and loans associations, credit unions, postoffices and Federal Information Centers. Or you may write to Carson City Silver Dollars, General Services Administration, Washington, D.C. 20405.

Hard luck Joe looked at the three of diamonds that West had led and remarked, "Too bad you used Stayman, partner. No-trump would be a far better contract than four spades."

Then Joe led his jack of trumps and finessed after West followed low. East was in with the king and led a diamond. West ruffed the second defensive trick and shifted to a heart. Joe had to lead clubs later and had no way to avoid the loss of two tricks in that suit.

"My usual luck," complained Joe. "We had the same number of cards in each suit. The trump finesse was wrong and West got in a ruff. Everything happens to me."

"Shut up and deal," growled North. He had seen that Joe should have made his contract in spite of all the bad breaks.

Do you see what Joe should have done?

Instead of talking, Joe should have put his brain to work at trick one. Then he would have cashed the king and ace of hearts before going after trumps.

He would still have played ace and another trump rather than take the finesse.

East would win the trick, as when Joe actually played the hand, and give West a ruff, but at this point West would have been dead. A club lead would take away one of Joe's losers in the suit and a heart lead would give a sluff and ruff.

Unity Evidenced Elsewhere

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Although American churches remain trapped in their "denominational ghettos," Christians elsewhere are uniting, says a top churchman from India. "It's happening irresistibly," he says. "The spirit is moving with power, drawing us together."

A.C. Dharmaraj, chief executive officer of the recently merged Church of North India, says a main reason believers of the East are outdistancing the West in achieving unity is their keener sensitivity to God's spirit.

"In the East, the spirit makes its appeal in our thought, our contemplation, our prayer," he says. "That is the secret. That is why the East is able to react more surely, quickly and intensely than the world."

Whatever the cause, unifications of once-divided denominations have proliferated in Africa, the Far East and Asia, including the merging of six North India denominations into a single body.

"The quest for visible unity as a demonstration of our spiritual unity is gripping churches nearly all over the world," Dharmaraj said in an interview.

He said divided denominationalism, transplanted abroad by American missions, has been a serious hindrance to the faith in many lands, a source of bewilderment to people who ask, "Is your Christ divided?"

"Try to explain it, and they simply can't comprehend what you're talking about," he said. "You become a laughingstock in dialogue with the intellectual community. They make fun of you."

Dharmaraj, 60, a slender, swift-speaking man, said there are 1,487 separate denominational mission agencies in the world, 146 of them operating in India—"splinter groups working to perpetuate their vested interests."

"A rat race is going on among missions," he said.

Asked why divided church organizations persist in the United States, he said ecclesiastical dignitaries recognize the essential oneness of the gospel, but when confronted with adjusting to that fact, "they draw back in theological hairsplitting not shared by laymen."

"The clergy dominate the thinking and structure and they stick to their guns," he said. "The inevitable corollary is a kind of captivity, an ecclesiastical, sociological and liturgical captivity which makes each tradition live in a ghetto of their own with a 'mission compound' mentality."

Dharmaraj, a onetime educator elected as the new North India Church's general secretary on its formation in 1970, was here trying to work out better relationships between U.S. mission agencies and the new church.

Since they remain separate, their continued policy of earmarking aid funds for their previously separate denominational institutions in India, tend to perpetuate divisions and economic imbalance between the institutions even though they now are included in the united church, Dharmaraj said.

"This imposes hardships on us," he added. "Our church is unhappy with attempts to perpetuate the private pipelines and divisions of years gone by. We keep saying we want to be a united church, but they won't let us."

Although the 20 North American mission boards have agreed to channel aid through the united church offices, they still designate most of it for specific institutions, once linked to their own denominations, thus hamstringing the new church in deciding for itself where the aid is most needed.

"It means that educational and other institutions in some areas are affluent and some in other areas are starving," Dharmaraj said.

Negotiations leading to the India merger had gone on for 40 years.

The six denominations unified in the church include Baptists, Anglicans (Episcopalians), British Methodists, Disciples Church of the Brethren, and the United Church, (a former merger of Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Moravians). Altogether they total about 900,000 members, with another 600,000-member Methodist body scheduled to become part of the church next June.

Evangel Series Starts

KINGSTON 10:45 and continuing through Dec. 14. A special week of Christian ministry will be conducted at the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church, Spring and Hone Streets starting today a Guest evangelist will be the Rev. Robert E. Griffen, a staff member of the Lutheran Evangelistic Movement.

Americans Lend Help In Nationalist China

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dormitory accommodations for girls studying to become teachers in nationalist China will be constructed soon in Taipei, thanks to the help of an American laymen's organization here.

Through its revolving loan fund, the Episcopal Church Foundation is advancing $20,000 to St. John's Cathedral in the Taiwan capital toward erection of a girls' dormitory for students from the provinces and from other countries. The foundation, which initiates and underwrites projects in support of the Church's work, advances funds for the completion of church structures on a no-interest basis. The loans are for 10 years with only 1 per cent administration charge on the unpaid balance.

The Rev. M.C. Chia, dean of St. John's, said the project dormitory on Church grounds will accommodate 84 girls in "an ideal environment for studying." Total cost is $50,000, the balance of which is being obtained from a United Thank Offering grant and public donation.

Exceeded Dickens' Greatest Expectations

"Bah! Humbug!"

Almost anyone in the English-speaking world who has heard of Christmas is also familiar with this expression of discontent synonymous with Ebenezer Scrooge, that greedy curmudgeon of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol."

The phrase succinctly expresses the sentiments of the miserly main character in the Dickens classic which will be rebroadcast as an animated musical special Sunday, Dec. 10 (5:00-6:00 PM. EST) on the CBS Television Network.

The universal association of Scrooge and "Bah! Humbug!" is evidence of the perennial popularity of "A Christmas Carol," for which Dickens had no particularly great expectations when he began to write it in the winter of 1843.

Who would suspect that a ghost story about a grumpy senior citizen living in solitary existence in a gloomy section of Old London would enhance generations as a heart-warming Christmas gem?

But, as its author soon realized, a story that converts a "squeezing, wrenching, grasping, clutching, covetous old sinner" into a Christmas-spirited philanthropist who feels "light as a feather, happy as an angel and merry as a schoolboy" must have a magic ingredient.

Dickens only hoped his "Carol" would be popular enough to recoup his financial losses at the time. For this practical purpose, he tried to please his readers as much as himself, writing what he felt they would enjoy in addition to what he felt must be said.

During a carriage ride through the English countryside, a regular source of his inspiration, Dickens decided upon the ghostly theme, which was especially appropriate since ghosts were a popular subject in the winter of 1843.

To the typically Dickensian plea against poverty and for generosity, which prevades so many of his works, the author also added to "A Christmas Carol" a touch of warmth and optimism that was immediately winning to every sector of society.

The story is said to be truly a carol in the sense of being short and direct and having a quality of saluting a joyous occasion. Furthermore, before its publication in book form, it was sold as a pamphlet for mailing as a Christmas greeting card.

Subconsciously, Dickens seemed to realize the tale's endearing qualities, as proved by the fact that he wrote it as a carol. But the author no more foresaw it as an enduring piece of Christmas trimming than he could foresee his own talent in the Shakespeare category or his grave honored by royalty in the Poets Corner of London's Westminster Abbey.

BLEAK HOUSE The specter of Scrooge's miserliness pervades the Christmas atmosphere in the home of Bob Cratchit as the family, including lame Tiny Tim, sits down to its meager holiday dinner, on "A Christmas Carol," animated special based on the Dickens classic, which will be rebroadcast on the CBS Television Network Sunday, Dec. 10 (5:00-6:00 PM. EST).

Tim Conway joins Cosby on "Bill Cosby Show" Dec. 11

Comedy star Tim Conway is Bill Cosby's guest on "The New Bill Cosby Show" in a broadcast which is also highlighted by cast regular Foster Brooks' singing performance, Monday, Dec. 11 (10:00-11:00 PM, EST) on the CBS Television Network.

Brooks diverges from his popular weekly characterization of a zany television network executive to sing "Ol' Man River."

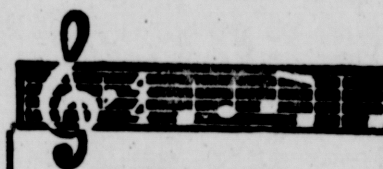

Appearing with Cosby in the "Wife of the Week" sketch, Emily Yancy is a commonly found kind of girl, Mrs. Nothing-to-Wear. Cosby delivers a monologue about the perils of growing old, and, as Dude, he meets disaster at the hands of a photographer.

Lola Falana varies her comedy and dancing duties this week by singing "If I Were Your Woman."

Cosby and Conway team in a comedy sketch in which Conway, as a jittery fireman with a fear of heights, tries to prevent a leap by Cosby, a would-be suicide perched on the ledge of a high building. In a second sketch, Conway plays the confused assistant of a spiritualist (Susan Tolsky) who promises to put Cosby, Miss Falana and Oscar DeGruy in contact with their deceased relatives.

In another comedy spot,

Hayley Mills in 'Tiger Bay'

Hayley Mills, her father John Mills and Horst Buchholz star in "Tiger Bay", melodrama about a 12-year-old slum child who befriends a murderer, on "The CBS Late Movie" Friday, Dec. 15 (starting at 11:30 PM, EST) on the CBS Television Network. (This is a black-and-white film.)

Miss Mills portrays a young child living in the Tiger Bay slum section of Cardiff, Wales. A young Polish seaman, Korchinsky (Buchholz), murders his girl friend, who has squandered his savings and been unfaithful to him while he was away at sea. The crime is witnessed by little Gillie (Miss Mills), who retrieves the murder gun the seaman has hidden and refuses to part with it because it will enhance her standing with the youngsters of the tough neighborhood. However, Korchinsky traps her in the attic of a church and threatens to kill her unless she hands the weapon over to him. From this tense situation, a strange rapport develops.

Highlight of any holiday meal is the turkey — plump with stuffing, beautifully browned and attractively garnished. Basting with a piquant sweet-tart glaze adds a glistening golden glow to the proud bird and complements its delicate flavor.

Glaze adds glamorous glow to holiday turkey

The beautifully browned turkey, stuffed and attractively garnished, is the traditional star of the holiday table. And not only is it a delight to the eye, today's turkey is meaty and succulent — a worthy bird to set before your guests at a Christmas feast.

To further enhance its delicate flavor, The R. T. French Company's Test Kitchens in Rochester, N.Y., suggest basting the turkey with a piquant glaze.

Here are three glaze recipes to pick from — all easy to stir together and each with a tantalizing sweet-tart taste that comes with the addition of lively prepared yellow mustard.

GOLDEN GLAZE FOR TURKEY

- ¼ cup butter
- ¼ cup French's prepared yellow mustard
- ¼ cup light corn syrup
- ¼ cup Widmer's port wine or orange juice

Roast a turkey according to your favorite method. To make glaze, melt butter in small saucepan; stir in mustard, corn syrup, and port wine. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Brush generously over turkey during last 20 to 30 minutes of roasting. Use drippings for making gravy — the glaze gives it a delicious flavor. Makes 1 cup glaze.

NOTE: Refrigerate any remaining glaze and brush over turkey leftovers before warming them in the oven, or combine with turkey gravy and serve over turkey slices.

ORANGE GLAZE

- 2 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup orange marmalade
- ¼ cup French's prepared yellow mustard

Melt butter in small saucepan; stir in marmalade and mustard. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Makes about ¾ cup glaze.

CRANBERRY GLAZE

- 1 cup butter
- ¼ cup jellied cranberry sauce
- ¼ cup French's prepared yellow mustard

Melt butter in small saucepan; stir in cranberry sauce and mustard. Heat, stirring with a fork, until cranberry sauce melts and mixture is smooth. Makes 1½ cups glaze.

His and hers

Say good-bye to wondering about what to give that handsome young couple on your gift list. This year make it a "his and hers" Christmas. For him, General Electric's styling dryer for men with brush attachment (shown here) and for her, the lady's model, complete with detachable wide-tooth comb, make gift-giving easy.

New Christmas fashions — Watches, second only to toys as America's most popular Christmas gifts, come in bold new styles and technologies this season: new asymmetrical ladies' fashion watches (left) from Christian Dior; the world's slimmest quartz watch (top), the new Accuquartz; a black-dialed asymmetrical day-and-date Accutron styled in Switzerland; and the world's first miniaturized tuning-fork watches for ladies (right) offered by Bulova. The Dior watches feature bright color dials, with contrasting color bands replacing traditional hour and minute markers; the Accuquartz watch's tiny quartz crystal keeps time vibrating 32,768 times a second; the Accutron has a tuning fork that vibrates 360 times a second; while the miniature tuning-fork watches have a midget fork that vibrates 480 times a second. In less accurate conventional watches, a balance wheel oscillates 2½ to five times a second.

Eye-catching and delicious

An eye-catching centerpiece that's as much fun to make as it is to eat, this Hostess Twinkie Tree is an easy kitchen project for a wintery afternoon.

Yule tree that's easy to make -- good to eat

Holiday time is great for children and what could be more fun when mom is busy in the kitchen than building a Twinkie Tree that's as much fun to make as it is to eat later on.

A wintery afternoon is a perfect time for creating this eye-catching goodie which can start out as a decorative centerpiece and then become dessert.

Here's what you need:

- 10 packages (20 cakes)
Hostess Twinkies
- 1 nine-inch styrofoam cone
- Aluminum foil
- 1 can ready-to-spread white frosting
- Green food coloring
- Gum drops, life savers, cinnamon red hots, peppermint candies and small marshmallows, for decoration

Cut 7 packages (14 cakes) Hostess Twinkies in half. Cut remaining three packages (6 cakes) into thirds.

Cover cone with aluminum foil and place on large plate. Use two toothpicks to attach each piece of cake to cone, first sticking toothpicks into cone, then pressing cake onto toothpicks. Whenever possible, place cut side of Twinkies next to cone.

Build the tree by rows, starting at the bottom. Use 10 half-size pieces for the first row, 9 half-size pieces for the second row, and 8 for the third row. Use 6 third-size pieces for the fourth row, 5 third-size pieces for the fifth row, 4 for the sixth row, and 3 for the seventh row. Toothpick the remaining half-size piece on top of the tree.

With pleasure and pride, serve your Yuletide guests home-made cheese hors d'oeuvres that are sure to please the palate. The Home Cheesery kit by Wagner Products Corp.

Home cheesery's here to lend her a hand

Thanks to the development of a new home cheese making kit, you can now make a variety of nutritional cheeses in your own kitchen. It's great family fare and very impressive when entertaining guests.

Made by Wagner Products Corporation, the Home Cheesery concept was developed with the advice and counsel of Wisconsin's finest cheesemakers.

The new cheesemaking kit contains all raw materials, except milk, for making 12 batches of cheese. One gallon of milk will yield  $\frac{3}{4}$  to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  pounds of cheese with a diversified choice of brick, colby, cheddar or many Italian types.

The amount of cheese is based on the kind of cheese being made and whether it is with whole milk, skim milk or non-fat dry milk.

With a Home Cheesery kit one can convert milk to an infinite selection of cheese or cheese spreads in a short afternoon or evening. The delicious finished product can be enjoyed im-

It's a "cheesy" gift and one sure to bring smiles long after Christmas is over. Twelve batches of cheese straight from the kitchen are easy to make with Wagner's Home Cheesery kit.

A unique gift item for almost everyone on your Christmas gift list, Wagner's Home Cheesery kits come attractively packaged with recipe/instruction booklets and retail for under $10.00.

Pretty things top lists of career gals

Picking gifts for career gals isn't as difficult as it may seem. The 40 million women in the nation's work force utilize their shopping time for necessities, although they long for the pretty things in life.

Lovely handkerchiefs are always welcome. She may always use tissues in the office, but when she goes out she likes to carry a real hankie.

No woman ever has enough note paper, and she needs different types for her busy days. Little notes for a quick "thank you" and exciting paper that reflects her personality.

Men are welcome in lingerie departments, and women welcome gifts of lacy slips they wouldn't buy themselves, or frilly nightgowns that tell her how he feels.

Most women have gloves to ward off the cold, but they always need some "nice" ones for evenings. Suede, leather (lined or unlined), cotton — gloves to fill in her wardrobe.

Lasting glow

A tastefully styled lamp to give a glow year 'round is a gift that will be appreciated in any home this holiday season. Stiffel suggests this 39½-inch column with bright old brass finish separating a hand decorated malachite column to blend with holiday greenery now as well as with other furnishings in a room throughout the rest of the year. Ivory textured shade shields 8-inch reflector bowl for proper light diffusion at sofa-side, chair side, or atop a delicate table desk like the one shown above.

Stockade Concerts In Gala Songfest This Monday Night

GLORIA HAARBYE, a frequent guest soloist in Mendelssohn Club concerts, will be heard with the group again in the second Stockade Concerts Group presentation of the season. The talented singer will offer arias from Bizet's "Carmen," Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," Gounod's "Faust," and other numbers.

KINGSTON

Brand new on the local musical scene this year, the Stockade Concerts Group is already making a name for itself with those who enjoy excellent music and varied programming.

With a well-received organ concert in late October to its credit, Stockade Concerts is now ready to present the Mendelssohn Club and its 50 men's voices in the second of its series of concerts.

Featured with the male chorus as guest soloist will be

Mrs. Gloria Haarbye, of Milton, who will sing some half dozen numbers during the Stockade program this Monday, Dec. 11 at 8:30 p.m. in the auditorium of The Old Dutch Church, Main Street, Kingston.

Opera and Yule

She will be heard in arias from Bizet's "Carmen," Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," Gounod's "Faust," and in offerings from such composers as Bohm and Ardit. Highlights of the evening by the Mendelssohn Club will include a variety of religious music, and Christmas carols and hymns, including

"Indians Christmas Carol," "The Sleigh" and "Silent Night."

The Mendelssohn singers already have many fans in the area. Soloist Gloria Haarbye's work is also well known. Currently studying with Miss Karen Ranung of West Park, she is soloist in Marlboro's First Presbyterian Church; has guested previously with such groups as the Mendelssohn Club, Poughkeepsie's Community Mixed Chorus, and the Hudson Valley Opera Workshop, with which she has sung roles from Die Fledermaus, Romeo and Juliet, Carmen, Cinderella, Werter, Marriage of Figaro, and Mozart's "Impressario."

Tickets will be available at the church door tomorrow night just prior to the concert for those who have not already subscribed for season admissions. Ticket prices are $2.25 for adults and $1.25 for students.

Other programs in the Stockade Concerts Group series for the future include The Canterbury Woodwind Quintet with piano on Tuesday, Jan. 23, and the prize winning baritone, Howard Shaw, on Tuesday, Feb. 27.

STOCKADE CONCERTS GROUP, new on the local scene this year, is readying its second offering of the season for this Monday night. Involved in the program, emphasizing Christmas, religious and opera music are (L-R) Mrs. William E. Rylance, accompanist; J. Anthony Hummel, assistant director; and Edward Sprute, president of the Mendelssohn Club, the 50 male voiced singing group to be featured tomorrow evening.

Readers Theatre Uses Music, Poetry, Prose

EUGENE IONESCO'S "The Bald Soprano" is the upcoming Readers Theatre production of Ulster Academy's Drama Group. The open to the public play will be presented this Tuesday, Dec. 12 at 8 p.m. in the Crystal Room of Kingston's Governor Clinton Hotel. Proving that the proper facial expressions play a major part in the proceedings at a recent rehearsal were (L-R) John Chanler, Jody Keefe, Dan Wise, Ram Montanaro and Missy Koozer. Also in the cast but missing from picture is Christina Riley.

"THE BALD SOPRANO," says Alphonse Apalategui, drama instructor and director of the Readers Theatre group at Ulster Academy, will be staged in the same style used last spring for the Academy's production of "Alice in Wonderland." It's a highly animated and stimulating form that challenges the audience's imagination and the student performer's ability, as illustrated in this exhortative pose by (L-R) Missy Koozer, Ram Montanaro, Jody Keefe and Dan Wise.

THE UNITED NATIONS SINGERS, many voices strong and dressed in a variety of colorful native costumes will perform on the night of Dec. 17 at the Third Annual Bear Mountain Christmas Festival.

'Christmas on the Moon' a Highlight of Festival

BEAR MOUNTAIN
An imaginative holiday display depicting "Christmas on the Moon" highlights the largest number of exhibits ever this season at the Third Annual Bear Mountain Christmas Festival. The 1972 festival runs from now to Dec. 31 at Bear Mountain Park and Bear Mountain Inn.

"Christmas on the Moon" features Santa Claus in a red space suit, complete with a bubble helmet and a spacecraft named the "Red Nose Rocket." The rocket has a blinking nose cone, flashing control panel, and is supported by candy-striped spacecraft legs. Sparkling moon rocks littered among silver craters provide a landing area backdrop.

The display, which has never before been exhibited at this non-commercial festival, is one of several that are expected to attract thousands of families this year to the annual three-week event. In addition to Santa, there are elflike little figures representing "moonlings", which seemingly bounce about the scene, creating an other-worldly Christmas scene.

From North Pole

Another highlight of the festival is Santa's return to his Bear Mountain quarters, where he has taken up residence until he and his reindeer-pulled sleigh take off to make their rounds on Christmas Eve. Santa arrived from upstate North Pole, N.Y., where he and his helpers reside and work at Santa's Workshop high in the Adirondacks throughout the rest of the year. He'll be holding open house daily at his temporary Bear Mountain quarters, and can be seen either taking Christmas lists from visiting children, riding about the grounds in his sleigh to exercise his eight real reindeer, or taking his lunch and dinner at the nearby Inn.

Other attractions are an animated international and American doll exhibit, an international Christmas tree display, a giant decorated tree with ornaments made by school children and adults in surrounding areas, exterior light displays, and Christmas cookie and pastry displays.

The cookie display consists of entries in the festival's now-famous cookie-making contest, which were judged prior to the festival opening. Last year, more than 350 cookies were entered by young and old alike, with prizes being given in several categories.

Shining over the festival each night will be the Park Commission's 40-foot electric star, mounted high atop Bear Mountain, facing the Hudson River. On clear nights, it is visible up to 25 miles away.

A Popular Event

Says a festival spokesman, "The festival, like the surrounding area, has grown enormously over the past few years. We're happy that it's become a highly popular event, not only for families traveling here from far away, but more especially for our park neighbors."

He pointed out that, in addition to the many exhibits that can be seen daily, there will be Nativity pageants each Saturday and Sunday evening at 5 p.m., and a final one on Friday, Dec. 22 at 7 p.m. A Chanukah celebration to observe the Jewish Festival of Lights will take place Dec. 12; and on Dec. 15 an old-fashioned Yule Log ceremony will be held. On this same date, the Rockland County Warpipe Band and the Hudsons, a local singing group, will perform. Choral singing by various school groups will also be featured nightly at 7 p.m.

All the various exhibits mentioned are now on display and can be seen on the ground floor of the Inn or outside, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, except when certain special events are planned for the cafeteria.

Folk Cantata... Rhythm And Christmas Color

RHINEBECK In "Shepherds' Rejoice" the ancient account of the birth of Christ is told first hand by the shepherds, who somehow seem to step right into our 20th century and talk to us all. Soloists in the cantata will be: Leon Yonik, baritone; Miss Debbie Callaghan, alto; Mrs. Linda Tamm, alto; Ernest Frank, tenor; and Hal Fields, tenor. Other contemporary selections include, "Strangers in the Streets," and "Calypso Noel." Adding a gentle and charming note to the selections "Gesu Bambino" and "The Snow Lay on the Ground," will be a junior choir of sons and daughters of choral club members. Several other pieces familiar to all will be: "The Twelve Days of Christmas," "The Little Drummer Boy," and "Christmas Hymns." The concert will be an unusual blend of modern and traditional music.

Tickets may be purchased at the door the night of the concert, or from choral club members. Adults, $1.25 and children under 12, 50 cents.

Vassar Concert A Yule Program

POUGHKEEPSIE Vassar College Choir and Chorus will present a Christmas concert of Renaissance and contemporary music tonight, Sunday (Dec. 10) at 7:30 p.m. The concert will be held in the Chapel on campus and is open to the public.

Jameson Marvin, assistant professor of music and director of the Choir and Chorus, will conduct. Works from the 16th century by Byrd, Palestrina, Di Lasso, and Praetorius, and from the 20th century by Stravinsky, Bassett, Pinkham, and Binkerd will be performed. The combined Choirs will sing Willaert's "Alma Redemptoris Mater" and Ives' "Psalm 90."

The Nutcracker Delights Anew

NEWBURGH Orange County Ballet Theatre will present the complete ballet "The Nutcracker" at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 16 and 17 in the Mount Saint Mary College Theatre, Newburgh.

"This is one of the most delightful of the Christmas stories, one the whole family will enjoy," says Regis Powers, artistic director of the company.

The cast of this sixth annual production by Orange County Ballet Theatre includes more than 50 area young people. The choreography, staging and direction has been done by Regis Powers, Elisabeth Schneider and Merritt Thompson.

Tickets for "The Nutcracker" are $2 for students, $3 for adults and may be obtained by calling 562-6750. Group rates are available.

'Billy Two Hats'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Jack Warden will go to Israel to star with Gegory Peck and Desi Arnaz Jr. in "Billy Two Hats" which Norman Jewison is directing.

Hand Me Down Things

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

THE REVIVAL OF "GONE WITH THE WIND" in a new wide-screen version in an area moviehouse reminds us of a story about a little old lady who obviously didn't wear tennis shoes.

And it's a story that testifies to the incredible appeal to the opposite sex possessed by Clark Gable, who portrayed Rhett Butler in the film. It centers on an incident that occurred when GWTW had its premiere back in the 1930's in Atlanta, Georgia, with Gable attending.

When he left Atlanta with the Hollywood contingent, a little old lady approached the front desk of the hotel at which Gable had stayed and asked if she could have his room. "Yes, madam," replied the room clerk. "If you'll wait a few minutes, I'll have it made up."

"No, I don't want the linen changed," she asserted. "I want to sleep in the same sheets."

Now there's a little old lady we'd have been proud to know — as both friend and confidante.

WE DON'T KNOW ABOUT YOU, BUT:

We think we can manage to get along without the custom-made waterbed that comes with its own Russian sable sheet for a mere $26,000 from the firm of Jacques Kaplan. It'd be a shame to waste all that money knowing full well in advance that the kid in the bedroom down the hall would find a way to stick it with those crayfish and tadpoles he's always lugging home from the local creek.

And we'll manage, too — thank you — without one of those $1,100 sterling silver vegetable baskets being marketed by Tiffany's. At that price, we can't afford NOT to stick with the straw one we got down on the farm years ago.

IT HAS BEEN BROUGHT TO OUR ATTENTION THAT:

Jim Tyrer, that husky he-man football star of the Kansas City Chiefs, is promoting "Guylashes" — or false eyelashes for the males of the world. Tyrer says it's part of the trend of men enhancing their masculinity, but quickly adds that he won't have to wear them because he's already "masculine enough."

That's ENOUGH, all right! Now, all we need to hear is that Joe Namath is pushing "Ladstick" — or coloring for you know whose lips — instead of Noxema, popcorn makers and lounging chairs — and we'll lose whatever interest we still maintain in the heroic sport of football.

NOBODY ASKED US, BUT:

We predict Susan Silver will be the future Neil Simon, female style. Her first film-for-TV, "The Couple Takes a Wife," and starring Bill Bixby and Paula Prentiss on last Tuesday night's Movie of the Week, was funny, honest, clever, and you believed every second of it was really happening.

We couldn't care less that The Dean Martin Show hasn't been doing too well in the ratings war — and that major changes are in store. The Gus' Diner segment is being axed and Dom DeLuise and Nipsey Russell will be getting bigger plays. Far as we're concerned, the whole show could be cut from the tube — and we'd never miss it. We'd rather spend the time reading an old seed catalogue — and that's really a desperation move to avoid watching Martin, since we don't even have a garden.

We did, however, find Monday night's "Perry Como Winter Show" lovely to look at, delightful to hear and generally all-around pleasant. And the scene in which Como stood on a blueprint, explaining that to him winter is a small town in Vermont as he sang "Make Your Own Kind of Music" — while the town was built around him — was the height of inspired cleverness.

IT SEEMS TO US THAT:

Parking in Kingston is getting more and more difficult by the day. We drove around a six block area five times one recent mid-afternoon and — when we finally found a parking space, we couldn't remember for the life of us why we were there in the first place.

The one-year-old tyke whose entry chart at a local hospital advised staffers that his favorite toy is dice — is a shoo-in for a $10,000 a week loser in Las Vegas in the not-too-distant future.

The media is making too big a deal about that just-out-of-high school kid who sued the school system in his town because he was graduated as adequately prepared to read and write — but can't — and therefore, can't get a job. In fact, all that jazz about nobody in the present generation being able to spell — and everybody in the old days being a Webster or Roget — leaves us cold. Fact is, we rarely have to come to the rescue with the kids' spelling, but our phone buzzes several times a day from a school-teacher friend and a business exec we know. Too lazy to look it up in the dictionary, they simply dial us up; ask us how to spell this word or that; save themselves a little time. So, far as we're concerned, that kid involved in the lawsuit is a con artist, pure and simple.

English Farce In 9 Stagings For New Paltz

NEW PALTZ a large rehearsal room that's through Friday. Performance "What the Butler Saw," the modern English farce by Joe Orton, is now being staged at New Paltz by the Department of Theatre Arts at State University College. The play is a delightful piece of fanfare that employs black comedy techniques to satirize contemporary ideas.

With this play, the Paltz student thespians are attempting a slightly different method of staging. Director John Herr has chosen not to perform the play in the college theatre, but in round situation. The audience will be on three sides of the play's action. Tickets are now available at the SUNY box office in the lobby of McKenna Theatre on campus. The box office is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Performance dates and times for "What the Butler Saw" are Dec. 15, at 8:30 p.m.; Dec. 16, at 6 p.m. and 10 p.m.; Dec. 17, at 2 p.m. General admission is $2. Tickets may be reserved by calling the box office at 257-2192.

The Last Trip Of The Steamboat Jacob H. Tremper

STEAMING INTO RONDOUT CREEK near the end of her career is the "Jacob H. Tremper." Freight for Kingston and down river points is piled on her forward deck. The photo was probably taken from the upper deck of a passing Central Hudson steamer shortly after leaving Rondout on the daily 4 p.m. departure for New York City.

PLACIDLY PADDLING her way up river, the "Jacob H. Tremper" is seen during her last year in service. With her sagging guards nearly dragging in the water and her white paint streaked and dirty, her appearance is similar to that as described in today's Tempo article as she was viewed from the Day Liner "Albany" by Captain Benson.

From a Riverman's Log

By CAPT. WM. O. BENSON

An old Hudson River steamboat that was always a great favorite with me was the "Jacob H. Tremper" of the old Central Hudson Line. As a boy in Sleightsburgh, I used to see her come in Rondout Creek at mid-morning on her way to Albany and then the next afternoon watch her again enter the creek on her way back down river.

The "Jacob H. Tremper" from her building in 1885 was always used on the Newburgh to Albany route, first for the Romer and Tremper Steamboat Company and then from 1899 until her end for the Central Hudson Steamboat Company. The Central Hudson Line had been formed in 1899 as a consolidation of the three separate former lines out of Newburgh, Poughkeepsie and Kingston to New York.

During the latter part of the 19th century and the first part of the 20th century, there were two steamboats in the Newburgh to Albany service — one steamer in each direction, carrying freight and passengers on a daily basis. After the end of the 1918 season, the service was reduced to one steamboat and the "Tremper" would go up one day and come down the next. During the early 1920's, she stopped carrying passengers and in her final years was used to carry freight only.

During the season of 1928, I was a deckhand on the steamer "Albany" of the Hudson River Day Line. That Labor Day, we were the regular up boat to Albany.

The next day on the down trip off Glasco, I was in the pilot house with Henry Briggs, the captain, the two pilots being down in the dining room eating their noon-day meal. At the lower end of Crugers Island, we passed the "Jacob H. Tremper," paddling her way up river to Albany.

It was the first time I had ever seen the "Tremper" from that angle. Looking down on her, she seemed to look so different, I could see the dip of each one of the buckets of her paddle wheels and the suction some 30 feet aft of her stern. How odd it looked to me.

Captain Briggs said to me, "Bill, I don't think the 'Tremper' will be around much longer. Look at her freight deck, no freight at all. It used to be she would be loaded to the guards."

Her deck was practically empty. Her guards seemed to be hanging in the water and her bow stem was twisted. She looked like an old man about 90, all crippled with age, trying to still limp up the river.

Late that fall, in early December, I was coming up from the flats at Seightsburgh, having been duck hunting. It was about 5 p.m. and it had just become dark as it does at that early hour in December. While walking on First Street, I saw the "Jacob H. Tremper" going out Rondout Creek. Her oil lights — she never had electric — were very dim. Somehow I had a feeling it would be her last trip.

So back down I went to the flats and stood on what we called the first bathing rock. There, I watched the old "Tremper" go out the Creek in the dark and then down the River.

It was a still, cold night. I could hear her paddle wheels lapping the water as she treaded her way down river towards Newburgh. I watched her until she went out of sight round Esopus Meadows light. The feeling I had of this possibly bring her last trip proved to be so, for that night she layed up, never to run again.

The next June, 1929, she was sold for junk and was broken up at New Windsor, just below Newburgh. As late as 1960, her tallows frame, which for so many years had supported her old walking beam, pointed skyward inside of the Standard Oil dock — a sort of a monument to where a fine old steamboat finally met her end.

BRUCE GEDMAN stands in the door of his anti-inflation, recycling-minded thrift shop. The "institution" originated in a garage sale; has caught on with customers looking for an alternative to today's perpetual price raising machine.

A Continous Recycling Center

Call it a phenomenon, confer upon it the term necessity, label it an outgrowth of and answer to inflation — but the fact remains that not since the days of The Great Depression, have the garage sale, the yard fair, the rummage sale and the thrift shop been so popular or existed in so many places at one time.

And, to the credit of all of them, it must be admitted that they do offer an alternative to inflation blues, higher prices, skyrocketing taxes and mass production. That's why more than a few area residents view Woodstock's "Sled Hill Thrift Shop" as a small light at the end of a long dark tunnel — on the theory that some light is better than none at all.

At 5 Sled Hill Road in the art colony, it keeps Friday through Monday hours from noon until the last customer has drifted homeward. And it all started as a garage sale late last summer, which so enthused Bruce Gedman by its success that he decided on a thrift shop as a permanent business. Since its opening, it has served the needs of many; has become the only continuous recycling center in the area; and has a charitable purpose, as well, in arranging donations to needy institutions.

Staggering Supply

Inside the "Sled Hill Thrift Shop" is housed a staggering quantity and variety of items of all shapes, sizes and colors. Even so, the place gives the impression of amazing neatness and order, with each article easily found in its proper place and arranged with care for customer browsing.

In an era of abundance when many consign household largess to the dump heap, Bruce Gedman urges people "Not to throw things away," but to bring them instead to him to sell, trade, buy and barter. And Bruce never haggles over prices; buys them at low prices and passes them along again at ridiculously low prices to help cut down on over-clutter. Instead of paying "more for less," he says, it's time to pay "less for more."

It seems to work in view of those who have spent whole afternoons there just browsing and exploring through baskets and boxes of knick-knacks and curious items (old baseball mitts, for one; embroidered placemats for another). Gedman's rock bottom prices also apply to such practical articles as furniture, heaters, household goods, kitchen utensils, tools, hardware and building supplies for the weekend handyman, who needs something quick on a Sunday. He'll also sale your saleables on consignment for a standard commission fee.

The "Sled Hill Thrift Shop" is definitely filling a need and, in the cold winter months ahead — time will tell if it gets the kind of support needed to keep such a rare cause going in this "day and age" of demand for more and more merchandise from industry. It's a recycling experiment that has its roots of the attics of yesteryears, while blossoming from too much of a good thing in today's ranch-style abodes.

Diverse Crafts At Today's Fair

POUGHKEEPSIE
A selection of handcrafts as diverse as glass blowing and wood carving will be open to the public during Dutchess Community College's third annual Crafts Fair today, Sunday, Dec. 10.

More than 15 student craftsmen and faculty members will demonstrate and explain the intricacies of their works from 1 until 5 p.m. this afternoon in the Dutchess Hall lounge and art studios.

The student craftsmen hope to attract a greater number of community residents to the increasingly popular demonstration and sale. Last year more than 1,000 patrons attended the event.

Several area professional craftsmen will augment the students' display and demonstration of handmade materials. Among the items on display will be jewelry by Mary Coiteux; doll making, Agnes Baldwin; leatherwork, Carol Grice; quilting, Mrs. Evelyn Barclay; weaving, Helena Levas; wood carving, John Grice; glass blowing, Stanley Sierodzinski; book binding, Maynard Ham; candle dipping, Amelio Rodrigas; enameling, Ruth Brunsetter; and spinning by Rebecca Straus.

A selection of candles by inmates of the Greenhaven Correctional Facility will also be exhibited.

There will be no admission charge and refreshments will be served.

ARTIST ROBERT ANGELOCH'S recent painting, "Balkan Intrigue," is illustrative of the excellent work upon which his reputation is founded. Now, Angeloch's paintings, serigraphs, etchings, lithographs, woodcuts and watercolors are featured in an exhibit at Woodstock's Rondout Bank through Dec. 29. Since his shows are always a pleasure for viewers, this holiday attraction is appropriately timed.

THE BIG BAND sound of Buddy Rich returns to Monticello Raceway Monday, Dec. 18. The talented drummer and band-leader will perform a one hour concert in the grandstand area beginning at 6:45 p.m. Rich and his 16 man contingent appeared at Monticello in a week long stand last summer; proved to be one of the most popular all-time attractions at the track. Small wonder since he's played on every major TV program; sold millions of records; is a regular veteran at top concert halls and jazz spots here and abroad.

Rubbings Duplicate Brasses

MIDDLETOWN
Rubbings of British monumental brasses dating back to the 13th Century are now on display in the Harriman Gallery at Orange County Community College through Dec. 15. The rubbings, an increasingly popular art and history form, are part of a collection prepared by Mrs. Mary Barrett, professor of English at OCCC, during visits to church and cathedrals in Great Britain last spring.

The Barrett rubbings duplicate in detail memorial plaques to nobility, clergy, prominent people and — by the time of the 15th Century — commoners who died between 1277 and 1597 A.D. The oldest rubbing is that of the 1277 A.D. monument to Sir John D'Aubernon made at the Church of St. Mary at Stokesbury D'Aubernon.

"For historians," Professor Barrett notes, "rubbings provide a perfectly-dated record of the costumes and clothing of an era. The development of armor, for example, can be traced very readily through these rubbings. For students of English literature, the rubbings illustrate not only costume but also the cultural and ethical values of the times involved," she adds.

Each of the 20 rubbings, some as large as seven feet, represents hours of strenuous effort by Professor Barrett. The technique requires that a suitable length of special paper be fastened to the plaque, and then rubbed inch-by-inch with cobbler's wax. The design in relief in the brass is thus transferred in detail to the paper.

Professor Barrett uses a high rag content paper that resists yellowing, although other rubbing enthusiasts may prefer architect's paper that won't tear but might eventually discolor. The British Monumental Brass Society suggests that all brass rubbings be done with black wax on white paper, but the OCCC professor completed several in gold wax on black paper for a more decorative effect.

Access to the church brasses is becoming more difficult to achieve, Professor Barrett explains, because of acts of desecration to the church grounds, the gradual erosion of the brasses, and the growing commercialism in rubbings. Mrs. Barrett, who won permission for her project in some places because it was for teaching purposes, signed statements that none of her rubbings would be placed on sale.

Because of the size of some of the rubbings and the fragile nature of the material, a special technique for mounting and displaying them was worked out by Ivan Mischo, chairman of the art department at OCCC. The public is invited to view them at any time.

Chamber Music Backs Chorus

STONE RIDGE
The Hudson Valley Chamber Orchestra will play at Ulster County Community College's Winter Concert scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight, Sunday, Dec. 10, at the Stone Ridge campus.

The Chamber Orchestra will be directed by Matthew Crisp, Associate Professor of Music at UCCC. It is appearing through a contributing grant from the New York State Council on the Arts.

Also performing at the Concert will be the College Chorus, directed by Olsen. Featured choral works for the concert will be J.S. Bach's Cantata 140, "Sleepers Awake," and Saint-Saens' "Christmas Oratorio."

The public is cordially invited to the concert in John C. Quimby Auditorium in Vanderlyn Hall on campus. Admission is free.

MOVIES

Super Fly

Now playing at both Kingston's Community and Woodstock's Tinker Street Cinema is this innovative, action-adventure film about life in the ghetto and the Harlem drug scene. It stars Broadway actor Ron O'Neal as Priest, a charismatic, big-time cocaine dealer. Fond of expensive cars and popular with the ladies, Priest and his partner Eddie (Carl Lee) hatch a plan for one final $1,000,000 score before walking away from the drug dealing scene.

O'Neal is excellent as the black super hero who's out to get "the man." And he's supported by an able cast that delivers some solid acting performances in this fast paced movie. In addition, there's an inspired musical score by Curtis Mayfield, one of the giants in the world of soul music.

"Super Fly" is potent, taut drama — and the story builds via an attempted mugging by a pair of junkies and the punishment of an errant pusher for failure to turn over all the proceeds from his cocaine sales. Street fights, crooked cops, death by car and overdose, professional killers and doublecrosses all swirl together to make this a visually exciting movie and a good adventure yarn.

All in all, a flashy film about a caper to end all capers — and a black Superman-Batman-Captain America, who'll take his symbolic place in the minds of audiences just as his white super hero forebears have.

Gone With the Wind

"Gone With the Wind" — bigger, more spectacular and more exciting than ever. That's an accurate description of this new release in wide screen and stereophonic sound of the famous David O. Selznick production.

Winner of 10 Oscars (among them Best Picture, Vivien Leigh as Best Actress, Hattie McDaniel as Best Supporting Actress (the first time a Negro had been so honored), Best Direction, Best Screen Play, Best Art Direction, Best Film Editing, Best Color Cinematography), it has always been for us the most magnificent picture ever made.

Now playing a return engagement at the Orpheum Theatre in Saugerties, its unforgettable love story set against a background of the Civil War is as powerful as ever. In its cast of thousands: a beautiful and then 26-year-old Vivien Leigh, a dashing and handsome Clark Gable, the stern-faced and leather-lunged Miss McDaniel, the late, great Leslie Howard, and the picture-pretty Olivia de Havilland, who had to be "de-gilded" for her mousy role.

Suffice it to say that we're glad it's back and, although we've seen it on five previous occasions, we're going again to swoon over "King" Gable and be moved by the biggest scene ever photographed — that of the Confederate wounded in the railroad station. Because, for us, "Gone With the Wind" is the most memorable movie of them all and a never-to-be-forgotten picture.

Other Choices

THE FRENCH CONNECTION and MASH. These two reruns, both superlative entertainment, make up the current double bill at Kingston's Mayfair Theatre. "Connection" is a remarkably realistic film about New York City detectives breaking up a narcotics ring; stars Gene Hackman in an Academy Award winning role as a tougher-than-tough cop. "Mash" is a wildly funny movie about the shenanigans of a group of Army surgeons in the Korean War; boasts the very talented Elliott Gould and Donald Sutherland in its cast.

RON O'NEAL, as only a super hero can, deals with a mugger in scene from "Super Fly," the black film about life in the ghetto and cocaine suppliers and dealers. Swinging adventure film is the current attraction at both Kingston's Community Theatre, and Woodstock's Tinker Street Cinema.

ULZANA'S RAID. One of the best westerns in many a moon, this film at the Rosendale Theatre offers a first-rate story filled with suspense and action. Starring Burt Lancaster and Bruce Davison, it puts to shame every other cavalry-vs-Indians movie ever made in its perfect pacing.

YOU'LL LIKE MY MOTHER and SOMETIMES A GREAT NOTION. Widely varied and, therefore, doubly entertaining double bill at Red Hook's Lyceum. "Mother" is a creaking stairs, locked attic, musty mansion suspense thriller, starring Patty Duke as an expectant military widow, who finds herself menaced by the mother-in-law she has never met on a visit to the home of that lady. "Notion" is a rough and tumble adventure yarn of lumbering in the Oregon wilds; boasts fine performances by Paul Newman, Henry Fonda and Richard Jaeckel, among a host of others.

DARK PASSAGE. An oldie but goodie, playing its last performance tonight at Rhinebeck's Upstate Films. Humphrey Bogart stars as a convict who escapes from San Quentin and tries to prove his innocence with the help of a woman (Lauren Bacall) who believes in him.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS need not necessarily mean a tie for him, an apron for her. Small and inexpensive works of art make far more interesting gifts and the recent paintings of Sheila Benow, on exhibit at Ann Leonard Art Gallery, 63 Tinker Street, Woodstock, from today, Dec. 10 to Jan. 6, hit the Yuletide gifting mark. Exemplified here by Miss Benow's "Calligraphic Landscape," her work is vibrantly attractive and fairly priced. Show opens at the Leonard Gallery today with coffee and a little something to munch on throughout the day from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Drop in, by all means, for browsing and buying — and, if you decide on one for a gift — your recipient will be in good company, since the artist's works are owned by such collectors as Senator Jacob Javits, Lotte Lenya, Jan Peerce, Clive Barnes and others.

SANTA'S WORKSHOP...

Remember how, when you were very young, you really thought that doll or fire-truck was made just for you by one of Santa's elves? Well, somewhere in this pleasant valley there is a craftsman, perhaps not very elf-like, working quietly and devotedly on a very special gift just right for someone on your shopping list. When these gifts are finished they are brought to the Woodstock Guild of Craftsmen on Tinker Street. You can see many of them there now . . . gifts you will be proud to give; gifts you would like to receive.

Hayden Festival Making a Debut

POUGHKEEPSIE
The Haydn Festival Orchestra will make its Poughkeepsie debut today, Dec. 10, 3 p.m. at Vassar Institute in downtown Poughkeepsie.

"We're bringing the chamber group to the Hudson Valley because there is really a great demand for chamber music here, as evidenced by the tremendous success of our recent HVP concert of baroque music," says Claude Montoux, conductor of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic and the Hydn Festival Orchestra.

The chamber orchestra originated last year in Connecticut and has been very successful there. It is made up of 18 virtuosi, many also members of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic.

Haydn and Mozart

The program will include works of Hydn and Mozart that have never before been presented in the Hudson Valley: Haydn's "Eine Abendmusik" and Symphony No. 46; and, Mozart's Symphony No. 1, written when he was nine years of age, and Two Arias for Soprano. The music had to be specially ordered from Ger-

The soprano soloist, Berenice Bramson, is a teacher at Mt. Kisco School of Music. She is well known to New York concert-goers through her many concert and opera performances with many of the most distinguished musicians of our time. She has appeared with the Hudson Valley Philharmonic on two occasions: in Mendelssohn's "Elijah," and just recently in Honegger's "King David."

For this concert, sponsored by the Germaine Benedictus Montoux Fund, there will be no admission; however, donations will be accepted.

restaurants featuring the finest in Chinese foods, the name, "Forbidden City," denotes the imperial inner palace at Peking. And, speaking of Peking, the proprietor is the impeccable P.K. Li, a college grad who speaks better English than David Frost.

Almost 200 guests crowded into the dining room one recent Monay for the restaurant's Grand Opening. In fact, there were so many cars that P.K. greeted guests outside, giving directions where to park. However, nobody pushed any panic - buttons; P. K. took everything in stride. But then, considering his nationality, when P.K. thinks of crowds, he means millions.

The buffet offered a large selection of hot and cold concoctions — Beef with Broccoli. Spiced Chicken dishes, the best Fried Rice we've ever eaten. Tryin' a taste of it all were Hilda and Bill Krom, the Larry Quittys, Ira and Lorraine Trast, Tom and Joan Joy, Charlie Fous and family. As for Charlie, he was jugglin' TWO plates; he claimed one was for his wife. But whether it was or not, it didn't really matter. Bein' a member of YMCA Health Club, Charlie works it off as fast as he eats it on.

Forbidden City is a family venture. P.K.'s wife Sue Li who is a programmer at IBM helps out at the restaurant as cashier. As for tiny daughter Daphne, she's got about a decade to go before she can chip in.

Open seven days a week (luncheons, too), the restaurant is a welcome addition to the Saugerties' scene. So . . . in case the epithet caused some adults concern, Forbidden City's not only ideal for dinner and Christmas soirees, but "safe" to send your teens to eat as well.

P.S. For those who were patrons back in the days it was Anton's, and who are wonderin' where the "pictures" went, we know. Seems that many of Anton's patrons were captured in caricature by artist John Davis of Barclay Heights. The drawings — 106 in all — were framed and hung around the lounge. When the restaurant was sold, a local waitress named Toni collected the prints and distributed them to their counterparts. Those "portraits" may've been "phrankly phony phakes" but the prototypes were so happy to get them, you'd have thought they were Rembrandts.

Spending Saturday night at The Lamplighter was sort of a case of Saugerties-revisited. Lou Di Donna, one of the Restaurant's most frequent patrons, was applauding all the food, in general, and the Coquilles, in particular, made at The Lamplighter since

Some additions have been the last time we wrote about it; and they are crying to be mentioned. Along with the lavish 1890 decor, there is NOW live entertainment in person of Cindy Olmstead at the keyboard AND Pete Naccarato tendin' bar . . . which can also be termed "live entertainment."

The crusty, homebaked bread and creamy cheese cake are still featured, and the finest meats (now from Bob Schneller, so who - need - say - more), prepared under the experienced eye of proprietor Bob Schultz. With such an array of assets, coupled with the warm welcome of Bob and his wife Maryann, one can say an evening at the Lamplighter is more than memorable.

Everybody knows by now that Freeman Police Reporter Walter S. Clark has retired. To him our fondest good wishes

At his recent dinner, Walt received everything from awards to honorary badges. But one gift we're sure he's gonna wear out is that portable typewriter. After 54 years in the newspaper game, Walt's memoirs would read like another "Kingdom and the Power."

Two More Times For You to See The Matchmaker

STONE RIDGE
With two well-received performances already a matter of record, Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker" will be staged again in Ulster County Community College's new theatre program on the nights of Dec. 15 and 16.

For the collegiate thespians, producing the play, elaborate in its scenery and costumes, has been a first-time effort that has had to be mounted from scratch. The first full scale dramatic production ever staged on the campus, it required long hours of labor (including the Thanksgiving holidays) to build scenery and stitch up costumes.

But it has obviously been well worth the work, if opening night audience reaction is any yardstick. Now, directed by John Lawson, it will take to the stage of the new Quimby Auditorium on campus again for two final performances this Friday and Saturday at 8:15 p.m.

Calliope Music

sets and a specially constructed thrust stage, and dressed up with 1890's costumes, "The Matchmaker" also utilizes calliope and other music. In the doing, it recreates a nostalgic era of the past; gives audiences an opportunity to see the straight play that inspired the long-run musical, "Hello, Dolly!"

Patricia Czarski of Kingston has the role of effervescent matchmaker Dolly Gallagher Levi, and Robert Dunbar, also of Kingston, is cast as Horace Vandergelder, the wealthy match she makes for herself. Many other area, metropolitan and out of state students are in the cast.

And, together, they've produced a lively and amusing evening of entertainment that adds to the fun of the holiday season.

Long-Run Show of Chinese Art

POUGHKEEPSIE
An exhibition of paintings and calligraphy by the 17th century Chinese painter Chu Ta is now on view at Vassar College Art Gallery.

Chu Ta was one of the major artists of his time, but this is the first exhibit to be devoted to his work; and, indeed, only the third time that an exhibition composed solely of the work of a Chinese historical painter has been held in the U.S.

Chu Ta was one of the great Individualist painters of his era. In the eccentric behavior described by his contemporaries, as well as by his radical departure from traditional modes of Chinese painting, he expressed his reaction to the troubled years of the early Manchu conquest. His daring simplifications of form, free treatment of space, and bold handling of ink and brush, while unmistakably Chinese, bring to mind similar characteristics in modern Western art.

An Introduction

This exhibition, selected from works in American public and private collections, is not intended to be comprehensive; but is designed as an introduction to this extraordinary and complex artist, focusing attention on the works themselves through carefully selected examples. Nevertheless, it contains representative examples of most facets of Chu Ta's work — landscapes, bird, fish and flower paintings, calligraphy, in the form of large hanging scrolls, smaller hand-rolls, album leaves, and a fan.

The exhibit will be on view until Jan. 26, 1973. Gallery hours are Monday-Saturday 9-4:30 and Sunday 2-4:30; during the Christmas recess the hours will be 2-5.

A fully illustrated 50 page catalogue accompanies the exhibition.

Poinsettia

In 1828, Dr. Joe Robert Poinsett brought the first poinsettias to this country from Mexico. There is a legend that a little boy had nothing to take to church as an offering on Christmas. He picked a weed and laid it on the altar. As it lay there, it turned into a beautiful, star-shaped flower.

The Christmas Tree

There are many stories about how the first Christmas tree was trimmed. One is that the famous German preacher, Martin Luther, started the custom. He was walking home one starry Christmas Eve night. He cut down a tree, took it home, and trimmed it with candles. The candles stood for stars.

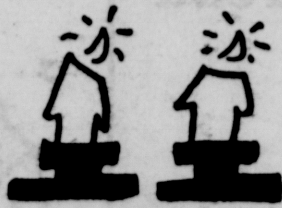

Everywhere you look this season you'll be seeing the symbols of Christmas. How many can you see in this picture?

Stars

Stars are the symbols of the beautiful star of Bethlehem that led the Wise Men to the Christ Child.

Candles

There is an old belief that if you put candles in your windows, they will guide the Christ Child to your home.

Mistletoe

Ancient priests, called Druids, who lived thousands of years ago in France and England, used mistletoe as a charm. The custom of kissing under it started in England.

Bells

Ringling bells play an important part in Christian worship. At Christmas they are the symbol of the happy news of Christ's birth.

Holly and Evergreens

Because holly and evergreens stay green all year long and bear fruit in the winter, for centuries they have been the symbols of enduring life.

Cards

The custom of sending printed cards started in England in the 1840's. The first ones were sold in this country in 1875.

How Christmas Seals Started

A Christmas Tree Decoration

What You'll Need:

2 paper cups with pointed bottoms and rolled rims

Gold or silver spray paint

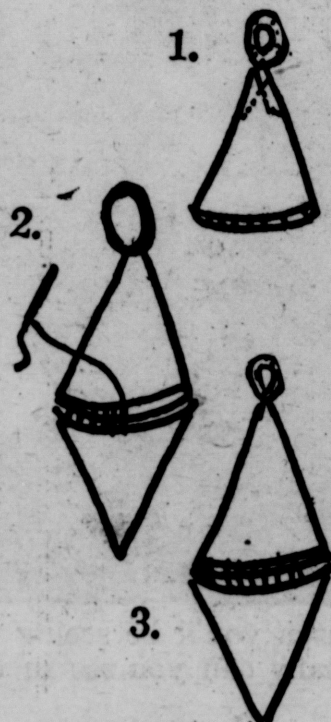

Pipe cleaner

Strong thread and a needle

1. Stick the ends of a pipe cleaner through the end of a cup. Spread the ends so they will not slip through after you make the loop at the top.

2. Put the rims of two cups together and stitch with strong thread. Use a big needle.

3. Spray with silver or gold paint. Decorate if you wish. Hang on a tree.

A man named Einar Holboell was a postman in Denmark. He wanted to find a way to help sick and needy children. His idea was to get people to buy a special Christmas stamp during the holiday season. During this time of the year there was a lot of mail, and just a penny seal on a letter or package would help him in his plan. The first Christmas seal was used in 1904. The money was used to build a children's tuberculosis hospital in Denmark.

A woman named Miss Emily Bissel of Delaware, liked the Christmas seal idea and worked very hard to get it started in this country. In 1907, the first stamps went on sale in Wilmington, Delaware.

Your mother and father have probably already been sent some seals through the mail. Today, money from the sale of Christmas seals helps fight air pollution and many lung diseases.

Mini-Recipe: Banana Nut Bread

What to do first:

Grease and flour a loaf pan. Set oven to 350 degrees.

What you'll need:

1 cup sugar

¼ cup shortening

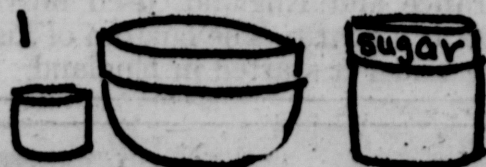

1 package 10¢ biscuit mix

What to do:

1 egg (well beaten)

½ cup nuts

1 cup mashed bananas

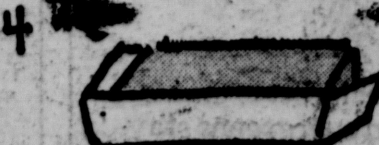

1 Cream sugar and shortening together.

2 Add egg to mixture.

Color By Number

Super Sport: Ben Davidson

Big Ben Davidson is in his 12th season in professional football, and that is remarkable for a man who did not play the game in high school. Davidson did play, however, at the University of Washington. In 1964, he signed with the Oakland Raiders. He is six-feet, eight inches tall and weighs 280 pounds. He is an outstanding defensive end. Ben sports a fashionable mustache. In his leisure time, he likes to ride a motorcycle.

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: TEMPER FLARE, HATRED KINDLES IN THEIR EYES, AND THEN SUDDENLY JACQUES FINDS JOAN SOBBING IN HIS ARMS.

THE FAMOUS TROUBADOUR, RENOWNED FOR HIS ELOQUENCE, FINDS FOR THE FIRST TIME, THAT HE IS WITHOUT WORDS. "I GUESS I LOVE YOU," HE STAMMERS.

"I KNOW YOU DO," SHE ANSWERS, DRYING HER TEARS. "BUT LOVE IS A SWEET AND QUIET THING THAT DOES NOT NEED THE HELP OF HIGH-SOUNDING PHRASES."

"SAIL HO! OFF THE PORT BOW!" CALLS THE LOOKOUT. AND ROMANCE IS PUT ASIDE AT THIS THREAT OF DANGER. FOR THIS IS THE BEGINNING OF THE DARK AGES WHEN THE LIGHT OF CIVILIZATION BURNS LOW AND EVERY MAN MAKES HIS OWN LAWS. ONLY THE STRONG SURVIVE.

PRINCE VALIANT ORDERS THE CREW TO STAND BY THEIR ARMS. THEN HE HOISTS HIS BANNER AND THE CRIMSON STALLION WAY 6 AT THE MASTHEAD.

ARN JOINS THE LOOKOUT. THERE IS SOMETHING FAMILIAR ABOUT THE APPROACHING SHIP. THEN HE GIVES A GLAD CRY: "IT IS MOTHER'S SHIP! I CAN SEE HER CREST ON THE SAIL."

BUT WHY IS SHE HEADING SOUTH FOR BRITANNY INSTEAD OF NORTH TO BRITAIN? THE LOOKOUT GIVES THE ANSWER. TWO VIKING SHIPS APPEAR OVER THE HORIZON, THEIR OARS CHURNING THE WATER IN SWIFT PURSUIT!

AS THE TWO VESSELS CONVERGE, VAL CALLS: "FOLLOW ME. LAUNCELOT'S CASTLE IS ONLY HOURS AWAY AND WE CAN FIND SAFETY IN ITS HARBOR."

BOO-HOO

YOU'RE RIGHT MOM, I DON'T REALLY NEED ALL THAT JUNK I BOUGHT

AND MOST OF THE CLOTHES I BOUGHT LAST MONTH WERE SHEER EXTRAVAGANCE

OH, BOO-HOO, DEAR... I'M SO ASHAMED AND I PROMISE YOU IT WON'T HAPPEN AGAIN

WE'RE SO SORRY, DADDY. WE'LL MAKE YOU PROUD OF US THIS MONTH

JUST GIVE US ONE MORE CHANCE, DAD

NOW I FEEL LIKE A YOU-KNOW-WHAT, FOR GETTING THEM ALL SO UNHAPPY AND UPSET!

HERE, THIS IS TO CHEER YOU UP--TAKE THIS AND BUY YOURSELF EACH A NICE PRESENT

AND, DEAR, IF YOU'LL STOP CRYING, I'LL GIVE YOU THIS FOR THAT PANTS SUIT YOU WANT
